Dairy Head Claims Deal Against Him By Producers

Group Offered Cut Prices to Those Who Would 'Raid' Routes, Ward Says

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Charges which have been simmering here since 1933 yesterday were before the special grand jury investigating milk prices and possible criminal efforts to stifle competition.

James J. Ward, president of this area's largest independent dairy, Embassy, told reporters that the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association tried to force him into a contract by urging competitors to "raid" his customers.

Ward, a long-time foe of the association, said he was questioned before the grand jury about an associatoin notice he said was sent to other dairies in 1937, offering them cut-price milk for customers they would lure away from Embassy.

Tells of $50,000 Offer

In 1942, said Ward, the association offered him $50,000 in cash and promised to buy up a $25,000 contract he had with other suppliers, if he would sign a contract wit hthe association. He said he also discussed this proposal before the grand jury.

Charges that the Maryland-Virginia Association employed "high pressure" tactics to get farmers to join the group, and dairies to buy from it, have been made here on several occasions.

In 1933, following a series of articles in The Washington Post, an investigation of monopoly practices in the local milk supply was launched by a Senate committee.

Both Ward and the Maryland-Virginia association figured in another Congressional investigation of milk practices here in 1939. The association weathered both inquiries.

The Justice Department's Anti-trust Division is presenting information to the grand jury in the present probe.

Before Jury For Hour

Ward, who was before the grand jury about an hour yesterday, told reporters later that the 1937 document which the association sent to its members was a two-page typewritten notice, signed by officials of the group.

The signers, he said, were Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, and Frank Walker, then president of the group.

He told reporters the 1937 notice was turned over to the Federal Trade Commission in 1939.

Under the 1942 proposal he said was made to him, involving the $50,000 cash, his farmer-shippers would have been required to join the Md.-Va. association, so they could not sell to another dairy Ward owns in Baltimore—Green Spring Dairy, he said.

This offer, said Ward, "was tempting, but it would have forced all our farmers into the association."

Gren Spring, said Ward, is the second largest dairy in Baltimore, serving about 50,000 consumers. Embassy sells to about 25,000 consumers in this area, said Ward.

Senate Shelves St. Lawrence Bill For This Session

By The Associated Press

The Senate scuttled St. Lawrence Seaway legislation yesterday by sending it back to committee for further study.

The action means, in effect, that no further Senate consideration will be given the multimillion dollar project this session.

Senator Smith (R., N. J.) successfully moved to send the bill back to the Foreign Relations Committee.

The vote was 57 to 30.

Bill to Bar Truman Easily Passes First Hurdle in Assembly

Richmond, Va., Feb. 27 (AP).—Democratic organization supporters picked up Governor Tuck's proposal to bar the name of Truman from the November presidential ballot and hustled it through the House Privileges and Elections Committee today by a unanimous vote.

The action paved the way for quick adoption by the Virginia General Assembly of Tuck's reply to Mr. Truman's civil rights program.

Before reporting favorably on the Tuck bill the committee amended it in two particulars. One would leave place on the ballot for Henry Wallace's third party, which the bill as drawn would have excluded. The other would permit only State conventions of political parties to instruct presidential electors how to cast their ballots, instead of permitting the convention to delegate this authority to a committee.

Plan Surprises Edwards

State Democratic Chairman Horace H. Edwards, mayor of Richmond, disclosed meanwhile the Tuck plan caught him by surprise.

Edwards declared that he "wholeheartedly" indorsed the "bold and courageous stand" taken by Tuck on the question of State rights.

"I am not convinced, however," Edwards' statement said, "that the

Martin Says House Will Pass Antilynching Measure by March 16

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senate Republicans yesterday gave one more prod to the Southern Democratic revolt by moving House-passed antipoll tax legislation out of a Senate Rules Subcommittee.

Nearest to enactment of any of four key points in the President's civil rights program, the antipoll tax measure has always been stopped before by a Senate Southern filibuster.

What aroused the Southerners, and stimulated talk of a Dixie bolt, were fears that this time Republicans can command enough votes to impose cloture, and put the bill through the Senate.

Martin Sees Early Passage

Senate Republican policymakers, following a steering committee conference, said it may be six weeks to two months, however, before any of the civil rights measures are called up on the Senate floor. Their plan is to summon a full conference of Republican Senators and let them decide which bill to use in their first attempt to smash a filibuster.

Some GOP leaders favor putting antilynching legislation in the spearhead role. House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., yesterday predicted antilynching legislation will pass the House by March 16.

Airline's Hope For Domestic Flights Dashed

Examiner Would Let Pan Am Pick Up Fares In Four Eastern Cities

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Pan American Airways' bid to enter the domestic airline field on a broad scale received a bad setback yesterday in the Civil Aeronautics Board.

CAB Examiner William J. Madden recommended against Pan American on the major portion of its long pending application for domestic routes. He proposed, however, that the international airline be certificated to provide through transportation between Washington, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore and points in Latin America.

Domestic service between these American cities and Miami—present terminus for Pan Am's Latin American flights—could be provided to a limited extent, under the examiner's report.

Other Airlines Object

Pan American's application for domestic routes has produced one of the most heated airline battles in years, with all other domestic and international companies bitterly opposing their bid.

The American pioneer in the international field contended that the grant of overseas routes to several domestic air carriers during the war put them at a grave disadvantage, as they are not authorized to carry on through service between major United States and foreign points, as are their rivals. Pan American officials urged that either the latter withdraw from the international field or that they be granted domestic routes.

Pan American chiefs will press their case at a hearing before the CAB, probably within a month or two. Eastern and National Airlines—whose traffic along the Eastern Seaboard would be cut by PAA competition—also are expected to oppose the examiner's report.

Under the latter, Pan American could carry domestic passengers between New York, Philadelphia, Washington and Miami only to fill empty seats on flights "primarily providing international services."

Hacker Shot, Assaulted by 2 Passengers

2 Boys Find Victim Lying Critically Hurt Beneath Embankment

Shot through the waist and cruelly beaten, a District hacker last night gasped out the story of how he was held up and assaulted by two fares.

The vicitim, James Hardy, 32, of 647 G st. ne., was found critically wounded at the foot of a railroad embankment at 8 p. m. just off New Jersey ave. near I st. se., by two 15-year-old boys attracted by his moans.

He told Police Pvt. W. G. Baucom, of the Fifth Precinct, he was beset by two men, who had hailed him at New Jersey ave. and Q st. nw., and asked to be driven to Half and M sts. se. En route, he said, they stopped him at gunpoint on New Jersey ave., near where he was later found.

Hardy said he was forced down the embankment to the railroad tracks, robbed of $4 and attacked. One of the fares shot a .45-caliber slub through the right side of his body, emerging from the left.

At 8:47 p. m., police found Hardy's cab abandoned at New Jersey ave. and M st. se., several blocks from the scene. Witnesses said they saw two men run from it west on M st. and may have entered another taxicab passing by.

The assailants were described as Negroes. One was said to be light-skinned, 25 to 28 years old, 5 feet, 9 or 10 inches, of slim build, and wearing a leather-like jacket. The second man was described as dark-skinned, 5 feet, 8 inches, slender build and wearing a cap and tight-fitting jacket. One or both may have been armed, police said in their lookout.

Hardy told police that after he was shot, he crawled across the railroad track to the bottom of the 20-foot embankment. He was found there by Bernard Coffer, 15, of 139 H st. se. and Paul Townsend, 15, of 118 Heckman st. se., who notified Police Pvt. Charles E. James, at the police property yard, 1st and H sts. se.

Up to 13 Millions

Approval Predicted for D. C. Hospital Modernizing Funds

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) yesterday predicted his House District Subcommittee will approve a bill to authorize spending up to 13 million dollars in Federal and District funds for modernizing Washington's non-profit, private hospitals.

Seventy per cent of whatever is spent would come from the Federal Government, and th other 30 per cent from the District. The initial grants would be made entirely by the Federal Government, with the District's share to be repaid later.

The plan is an extension of a program to give Washington a new hospital center, in which Emergency, Garfield and Episcopal Hospitals will take part. The hospital center bill went through Congress two years ago. Authorization of 35 million dollars designed to cover both the center and other hospitals was contained in the bill. With the center now expected to cost 22 million, the new bill would tap the other 13 million for the hospitals not in the center.

The District Commissioners, however, are against the program, because there is no revenue in sight to cover the District's share and any money spent that way would cut into the funds for improving public hospitals which care pirmarily for the indigent.

The bill was introduced by House District Comittee Chairman Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.).

Major General Philip B. Fleming, FWA administrator, strongly urged adoption of the Dirksen bill in a statement read to the subcommittee by James W. Follin, assistant FWA administrator. He gave this picture of Washington hos-

One man was killed and another injured seriously about 7 p. m. last night by a hit-run driver in nearby Virginia while seven persons were injured when a bus struck a tree in Mount Rainier.

Killed in the hit-run accident was J. C. Bare, 65, Route 1, Fairfax, Va.

Injured was Clate H. Baldwin, 48, Route 1, Fairfax, reported in fair condition in Arlington Hospital with possible skull fracture, fractured shoulder and other undetermined injuries.

Is 13th D. C. Victim

Locally, the District's thirteenth traffic death of the year was recorded yesterday when Mrs. Sallie V. Knight, 48, 522 Tennessee ave. ne., died in Casualty Hospital of injuries suffered Tuesday when struck by a streetcar.

Police said Mrs. Knight stepped from a loading platform at 15th and H sts. ne. into the path of the streetcar. She was admitted to the hospital with a fractured skull and possible internal injuries.

Operator of the streetcar was identified by police as Rodney F. Jenkins, 35, 5904 E. Pine dr., Riverdale, Md.

Driver Faces Charges

Cecil I. Davy, 34, Route 1, Clifton, Fairfax County police arrested Va., and charged him with manslaughter and hit-run driving in connection with the fatal accident which occurred on Route 211 about 3 miles west of Fairfax. Bare and Baldwin, police said, were walking along the highway.

Sergt. R. F. Utz and Pvt. J. Burke of the Fairfax County police arrested Davy at a farm on Braddock rd., where he is employed, about 9 miles from the scene after making a check of the neighborhood following witnesses' description of the hit-run vehicle, a pickup truck. He did not remember hitting anything, they said he told them.

Davy is being held in the Fairfax Jail without bond.

In the Maryland accident which happened shortly after 6 p. m. a fully-loaded Capital Transit Co. bus crashed into a tree at 33d and Perry sts.

According to witnesses, the left front wheel of the bus apparently locked as it made a right turn from 33d st. into Perry st., throwing the heavy vehicle into the tree on the left side of the street.

The injured were taken to Prince Georges County Hospital by ambulances from the Brentwood and Bladensburg volunteer rescue squads.

Admitted to Hospital

Admitted to the hospital were Mrs. Mildred Brady, 36, 3607 Upshur st., Brentwood, with abrasions to the leg, and Frances Ronsisvalle, 28, 3813 Oglethorpe st., Hyattsville, who suffered spinal injuries.

Treated and released were Prentice R. Whitman, 26, 4300 South Dakota ave. ne., driver of the bus, possible internal injuries; Mrs. Brady's husband, William S. Brady, 35, leg injuries; Mrs. Eleanor Coates, 5407 39th ave., Hyattsville, leg injuries; Aluis Harris, 24, 4104 Jefferson st., Hyattsville, minor injuries, and Miss Betty Morales, 34, 4001 Ingraham st., Hyattsville, minor injuries.

Official Leak To Kremlin Story Denied

Committee Told Wartime 'Pipeline' Was Maintained By State Aide

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Charges and denials that a high State Department official opened a wartime pipeline from President Roosevelt's desk to the Kremlin were reported yesterday to Congress.

An investigator for a subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee said the system worked so efficiently that a telegram the President intended for China reached Moscow before it left Washington. His findings were contained in the printed transcript of hearings on the State Department Appropriation Bill for 1949.

Subsequently, Hamilton Robinson, control director of the department, placed in the record a statement that the official in question still was employed because further investigation failed to substantiate the charges. They resulted, he said, from a misunderstanding of information passed from one OSS official to another.

"No. 52" Defended

The committee's investigator referred to the State official as "No. 52" and said he got his information from "X-6, a special emissary for" Mr. Roosevelt. He said he got his information from department files and that the State Department officials had been seen talking with a man who was trailed to the Soviet Embassy.

This story, Robinson said, was denied by the OSS official to whom it was attributed. Robinson added that all of "No. 52's" contacts were determined to have been made officially.

Nevertheless, after Robinson's explanation of this and 107 other cases of questioned loyalty, Subcommittee Chairman Stefan (R., Nebr.) declared:

"I would say this to you, that it makes me disturbed as to whether we have any representation of the United States in the State Department. I have not been as much disturbed in a long time."

Robinson testified that 255 loyalty investigations were made in the State Department in 1947, resulting in 124 dismissals. He said 15 were dismissed under an amendment to the 1948 appropriation bill, all of whom had come to the department from wartime agencies.

In hearings before the same subcommittee on the Justice Department appropriation bill, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said fingerprints in connection with President Truman's loyalty program had turned up 11,521 Federal employes with police records out of 401,211 fingerprinted (8.5 per cent). The "great mass" of these records, he said, involved felonies.

Hoover told the committee his agents by last December 1 had completed 84,923 loyalty investigations and had completely cleared 84,780 employes. Only six of the 143 necessary field investigations had been completed by December 10, he said, resulting in two clearances and four resignations before the investigations were finished.

At the same time, the Army Department announced dismissal of seven employes of its finance and administrative records center at St. Louis for security reasons. An Army official, however, said 12 had been fired and 26 were under investigation.

Investigations leading to the dismissals began six months ago, the Army said, by 1000 persons hired

State Department Budget Cut Asked; 1500 Might Lose Jobs

By Jerry Kluttz

The State Department would be forced to fire about 1500 employes here under its 1949 budget recommended to the House yesterday by its Appropriations Committee.

The committee suggested a slash of four million dollars in salary funds for 5500 State Department employes in this city. In addition, the jobs of several hundred foreign service people would be wiped out.

A wide shift of jobs would be brought about in the Commerce Department under the committee recommendations. Layoffs would have to be made in the Census Bureau, the Secretary's Office and the Bureau of Foreign & Domestic Commerce. The 150-man Office of Technical Services would be abolished completely.

However, these reductions would be largely offset by an expansion of both the Civil Aeronautics Administration and the Civil Aeronautics Board. The foreign trade statistics unit in the Census Bureau would be transferred to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Although Commerce was given a 65-million-dollar cut in its budget, its officials say the deep slash would have little net effect on its 34,000 employment figure.

Justice was the third major department provided for in yesterday's bill. Its budget of $116,922,000 was cut only $591,000, or money to pay for about 140 employes in its administrative and other divisions.

The department, however, would be compelled to make a major cut in personnel under the President's budget. It has about 27,112 jobs and they are slated to be trimmed to 24,880. The big layoff of about 1800 is to be in the FBI.

The committee report on the State Department was blistering. It said its present structure is "wasteful, costly, and inefficient," and that more effective work could be accomplished with a smaller staff.

Both the State and Commerce Departments were criticized for their number of top-bracket employes. The report said State had increased its number of "high paid" employes from 47 in 1939 to 379 as of today. State's total employment has multiplied several times during that period as well as its duties. In Commerce, the report said, its number of high-bracket employes had jumped from 49 to 545 in the same period.

The committee commented that there seems to be something defi-

Stalin Asks Finland To Join Soviet Bloc With Pact for Defense

Nation Resignedly Tranquil as Move Coincides With Prague Turnover

Helsinki, Finland, Feb. 27 (AP).—Sources close to the government said today Marshal Stalin has asked Finland to join the chain of Soviet defense pacts stretching across Europe.

The news brought pessimism to many Finns who said they feared their parliamentary freedoms might be extinguished before long. After losing two wars with Russia in less than 10 years, Finland's mood tonight was one of resigned tranquility.

Informants said Stalin sent a diplomatic note to President Juho Paasikivi on Monday—just when the engineering of a new Communist-controlled government was nearing its conclusion in Prague—pressing for conclusion in the nearest future of a defense treaty similar to that with all Russia's other immediate western neighbors.

Similar to Czech Pact

Various sources said the proposed pact would be very much like that concluded by Moscow with Czechoslovakia in 1943. This was a 20-year treaty of friendship and mutual defense against Germany or any power uniting itself with Germany directly or indirectly in war. The proposed pact therefore would be somewhat different from the simple alliances negotiated by Moscow with Romania and Hungary.

Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, in signing a treaty with Hungary on February 19, said a barrier against "imperial states" now existed in "pacts of friendship and mutual assistance with all states on (Russia's) western frontier from the Black Sea to the Baltic."

A Finnish pact would extend the line beyond the Baltic.

Just Revealed to Nation

The sources said the note was delivered on Monday but the nation was not informed until today. Then it was learned that President Paasikivi had followed up long discussions yesterday with members of the government and the foreign relations committee of Parliament with a fresh round of conferences today. Government and party leaders again were summoned to meetings.

Informed quarters pointed out that no matter how such a pact might be worded it would imply that Finland had been incorporated into the eastern bloc.

Acceptable Negotiator

Paasikivi, the chief of state, usually has been an acceptable negotiator in Moscow. He successfully concluded the peace that ended the winter war of 1939-40.

The 18 ministers headed by the leftist, Mauno Pekkala, include three Communists and three Socialist unity party members who are in a single bloc known as the Popular Democratic Party. There are five Social Democrats, five Agrarians, one Swedish Peoples party

New Czech Premier Ridicules 3-Power Protest Over Coup

By Seymour Freidin

Prague, Feb. 27.—Communist Prime Minister Clements Gottwald, after watching his 12 new ministers sworn in today by President Eduard Benes, assailed the tripartite denunciation of the tactics that gave him power in Czechoslovakia.

He said Czechoslovakia would not take "lessons in democracy from those who have Munich on their conscience." The government tonight also charged that Britain, the United States and France "had not the slightest legal right to interfere or even criticize the internal life of Czechoslovakia."

President Benes told the new cabinet "the decision to accept you was difficult personally for me." He said he had accepted Gottwald's choice lest the crisis lead to a "sharp division of the nation which could eventually lead to chaos."

Benes Goes to Country

This afternoon Benes and his wife drove to their country home at Sezimovo Usti, in northwest Czechoslovakia.

Opposition sources contended that President Benes would draft his resignation there. The government said it knew nothing about such a move. The President, according to the Ministry of Information, went away for the weekend.

But the Communists, flushed with victory, did not pause. Besides continuing with arrests and dismissals, they turned the screws on foreign correspondents in Prague.

The correspondents were summoned to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs where they were told there were too many "distortions" in news reports on developments of the last week.

Government officials lectured correspondents on good reporting. They suggested it would be a very good idea in the future for newspapermen "to rely mainly on official sources."

All Democracy Is Threatened, Bidault Says

Paris, Feb. 27 (NYHT.).—French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault declared today the survival of democracy was threatened by the Communist seizure of power in Czechoslovakia.

"It is impossible to think," he told the National Assembly, "that such maneuvers can be continued indefinitely on the chessboard of Europe without leading to a situation which can rapidly become dangerous. This is neither a warning nor a summons. It is a cry of alarm that comes from the bottom of the heart."

"This new event," he said, "is of the greatest importance. It is a disservice to the peace and runs counter to efforts that have been made to liberate Europe from all tyranny.

"This event is part of a whole plan whose dreadful character worsens as incidents come closer to us. "Not so long ago the drama of Czechoslovakia was a ringing alarm signal for the world.

"Once again the Bohemian sky is darkened. The hearts of men who love peace and freedom are once more shaken. The pride of a nation, its integrity and its independence are threatened by means which cannot be justified.

"That which has just happened has disturbed the international situation and the uncertain balance of the world," he said. "The survival of democracy founded on freedom is once again threatened in a brutal manner."

China Promised 37 B-17's and 1034 Other Craft

America has committed itself to provide China with a first-line air force of 1071 planes, including four-engined bombers and fighters, Government officials disclosed last night.

The State Department sent a report to the Senate Appropriations Committee revealing the amount of aid extended to Chiang Kai-shek's government under an agreement reached before the end of the war. It showed that:

A total of 936 warplanes already has been delivered, and 135 additional craft have been earmarked for later transfer. The latter include 27 B-17 Flying Fortresses, 42 P-47 Thunderbolts, 53 P-51 Mustang Fighters and 3 C-46 transports.

When complete, the Chinese government will have received equipment for an air force comprising one heavy bombardment group, one medium bomber group, four single-engine fighter groups, two troop carrier groups and one photo-reconnaissance squadron.

In addition, the United States has trained 1546 pilots, 365 bombardiers, 192 navigators and 2034 technicians for the Chinese air force.

Jury Is Told Meyers Rushed To Beat Probers to Records

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A hurried night trip with Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers to remov and search corporation records before Senate investigators got to them was related for the first time yesterday by Bleriot H. Lamarre, "dummy" president of Aviation Electric Corp.

Lamarre told a Federal jury that the wartime AAF procurement officer rushed to the darkened war plant to be sure no records remained which would connect Meyers with the company and give the lie to a story he had "concocted" to bamboozle a Senate committee.

The 36-year-old Government witness, now a filling-station attendant, told the jury that Meyers, his "boss," had directed him to testify under oath to the committee that he had wasted all of his big wartime "book salary" on race tracks and bookmakers." Actually Lamarre said, he had turned over all but three or four thousand a year to Meyers.

The dapper 52-year-old retired general is on trial here on three counts of inducing Lamarre to lie under oath to the Senate War Investigating Committee. Lamarre, who finally changed his story to the investigating Senators, has pleaded guilty to perjury and his sentence has been suspended.

Lamarre told the jury that the Government's charge was true. Meyers had directed him to swear that the general was not the real owner of Aviation Electric Corporation, a wartime subcontractor

PEOPLE In The NEWS

Juho Paasikivi

Finland's President Juho Paasikivi, with whom Josef Stalin is reportedly dickering, might be termed a capitalist of the old school. He's a well-to-do former banker.

Paasikivi

The "Mystery Man of the North" during the war years, he proved himself a capable peacemaker, for his vulnerable nation in its dealings with Russia. He's a genuine Russophile, but it is equally true he never was a close personal friend of Marshal Stalin, as ugly rumors had it.

Paasikivi was born Johan Gustav Hellsten on Novemb-. 27, 1870, at Tampere, Finland, later "Finnifying" his name to conform to his claims of Finnish stock. He studied law at Finnish, Swedish and German universities; later taught it in Helsinki University, from 1899 till 1902.

He then went into the banking and insurance business and entered public life as a member of the Diet in 1907. The following year he became Minister of Finance for Finland, then a semi-autonomous grand duchy under Russian rule.

Head of the Finnish peace delegation that negotiated the Treaty of Dorpat, October 14, 1920, he was credited with ending Finland's first war with Russia and securing his country's existence as an independent state. Again, after the winter war in 1940, his friendship with Russians brought relatively moderate peace terms for the Finns, and he became his country's minister to Moscow till war's outbreak.

Paasikivi vanished from politics then, reappearing propitiously in November 1944, when the Finns most needed moral support, to become Finland's Prime Minister. After Baron Karl Gustav Mannerheim retired as President, Paasikivi was elected to the office.

Physically, he is thick-set, with a square head, ruddy face and bushy gray hair. He married twice and has a grown daughter, Anniki.

Christian A. Herter

When tall, personable Christian Archibald Herter gets where he's going in the foreign relations business—and he's well on his way—a World War I prophecy will be fulfilled.

Herter

America's great outpouring of groceries to Europe in the hope of combatting Communism is a familiar pattern to the 52-year - old Yankee Representative from Massachusetts. He played virtually a single-handed role in much the same story immediately after World War I in drawing attention of Food Administrator Herbert Hoover to the hunger of Germany.

A 23-year-old attache at the time, Herter drew Hoover's prediction: "That boy probably will go some place in the foreign relations business."

His early years in the House were spent in obscurity, but today finds the lanky, Paris-born Bostonian regarded as the "Vandenberg of the House" in foreign relations problems.

He headed the famed Herter Select Committee on Foreign Aid, which grasped European problems in a whirlwind, work-filled six weeks.

Born near Paris' Luxembourg Gardens, the son of wealthy artists, Herter came to the United States in 1904, attended Browning School in New York, and was near the head of his Harvard graduating class. He wanted to be an architect, but quickly changed aspirations when given a State Department post with Ambassador James W. Gerard in Berlin.

He was in the Massachusetts Legislature 12 years; came to Washington and Congress in 1942.

With Mrs. Herter, he lives at 3336 Dent pl. nw. They have four children—the youngest 18.

Capt. Loraine T. Johnson

Capt. Lorain T. Johnson has been acquainted with Washington's traffic problems since 1925, when he first mounted a policeman's motorcycle to chase the city's speedsters of the era.

Since then, he has been a cop on the corner directing traffic, has gone after our present-day speedsters on a police motorcycle and has handled traffic administrative matters.

Johnson, who was transferred from the Fifth Precinct to the Traffic Division yesterday, received praise from his chief, Inspector Arthur E. Miller, who said:

"With Johnson here, we will really see things go. We've got a man-size job to do, since the traffic death toll appears to be rising."..

Johnson, like Miller, had attended the Traffic Institute at Northwestern University under a James S. Kemper fellowship.

Johnson is 46 years old and was born in York, Pa. He was in the Marine Corps in 1923 when he decided he liked the looks of Washington. He decided to esettle here. In 1925, he passed his police examination.

Most of the time since then, he has been connected with the Traffic Division. But shortly after he was made captain in July, 1947, he was transferred to the Fifth Precinct.

He is married and has a son who is 17 years old. They live at308 Aspen st. nw.

Considering Russo-Finn Pact

PAASIKIVI PEKKALA LEINO

These three Finnish leaders were said yesterday to be discussing a proposal of the Soviet government for a pact between the two nations. President Juho E. Paasikivi and Premier Mauno Pakkala, who heads the coalition government formed a year ago, have it under advisement. Interior Minister Yrjoa Leino is said to be in favor of the treaty

Michael Reported Soon to Renounce His Abdication

Paris, Feb. 27 (AP).—Former King Michael of Romania will renounce his abdication in a statement next week, a reliable Romanian source said tonight.

This source said the 26-year-old former monarch will claim his abdication December 30 was signed under threat of force and will assert his right to the throne.

When Michael quit, the Communist-dominated Romanian government proclaimed a "people's republic."

Michael is due in Paris Monday for conferences with French political leaders prior to making his statement at a press conference, probably on Tuesday or Wednesday. He is driving to the French capital from Luxembourg with his fiancee, Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parma.

Senate Approves $861,643 in D. C. Deficiency Funds

The Senate yesterday completed legislative action approving $801,643.67 in deficiency funds for the District to spend this fiscal year.

The District money includes $36,000 to finance the penny milk program for Washington public school children through June 30. Also, in the bill is $54,000 for Gallinger Hospital, most of it to be used for putting three elevators into operation in the psychiatric building.

Changes affecting Federal agencies will force the bill to conference, but no changes will be made there on the District money.

Palestine Service Ends

The Postoffice Department said yesterday money order service from the United States to Palestine will be suspended at midnight Sunday.

and one non-party member.

Finland has signed a trade agreement with Russia and many Finns have expressed hope the situation, though similar to Czechoslovakia's might turn out differently.

They based this hope on the smallness of the Communist party here which has only about 45,000 members and 51 members in a parliament of 200.

The Communist-dominated Popular Democrats, largest single party in the national elections of 1945, lost more than 300 seats in municipal council elections last December and slipped to third place.

The suggestion of a defense pact with Russia was made by the Finns themselves as early as four years ago to ease the hard conditions of the armistice.

The Russians did not seem interested, insisting on a peace treaty first. Among the conditions of the treaty were the cession of Karelia and the Petsamo area which gave to Russia some of the country's most valuable eastern timber lands and mines; Russia was given a lease for 50 years of the Porkkala area near Helsinki for a Soviet naval base commanding the eastern Baltic approaches to Leningrad. Finland obligated herself to pay $300,000,000 reparations in six years.

Truman Signs 1-Month Rent Control Extension

Key West, Fla., Feb 27 (U.P.).—President Truman tonight signed a stop-gap bill extending rent control until April 1.

He also signed a resolution extending for one year the wartime authority of the Maritime Commission to charter, sell and operate merchant vessels.

The measures had been flown here after congressional passage.

Ministry of Information will have to consider taking the proper measures," Dr. Oskar Kosta of the Ministry of Information, warned.

The government representatives said the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Information would be the "sole" arbiters in adjudging what constituted distortion of the news. They said each alleged violation would be judged individually "for the proper measures."

Another government press officer, Evzen Klinger, objected to the use of the word "Red" which, he said, had appeared in newspapers abroad when "Communist" or "Social Democrat" was meant.

Benes Addresses Cabinet

At 10:30 this morning Gottwald and his new ministers appeared at Hradcany Castle where a detail of soldiers flanked the entrance

President Benes escorted them in.

"You have said correctly that my decision was not easy," he told Gottwald, "to the contrary, you have said yourself that for me personally it was very difficult. I considered the crisis a long time, and seriously, I arrived at the conclusion that it was necessary to accept your proposals.

"I have seen that any other solution would deepen the crisis and would lead to a sharp division of the nation and eventually this could end in general chaos. But the state must be conducted and administered. You want to conduct state affairs in a new way and in a new form of democracy. My wishes, addressed to you and the nation and the state, are that this new way may be favorable for all."

Gottwald replied that plotters had tried to overturn the government. He thanked Benes for contributing to "a quick solution of the crisis in the spirit of our people's will."

"You thus helped us considerably so that the whole march of events was relatively rapid and it could follow, and will continue to follow a strictly democratic, constitutional and parliamentary road."

Foreign Critics "Rejected"

Gottwald said the constituent assembly "will approve the new cabinet and its program."

"We can therefore conscientiously reject certain weak statements abroad about a threat to our freedom and parliamentary methods," Gottwald said.

"We will never take any lessons in democracy from those who have Munich on their conscience, those who dealt with Hitler Germany to divide us up and those who in a most undemocratic and illegal way tore up their treaty of alliance and friendship with us."

[The Associated Press said a stream of announcements in the Communist-controlled radio began to make clear the future pattern for this once democratic land.

[Zdenek Nejedly, new education minister, said "schools must be political just as the Army must be political." he said new textbooks would be prepared.

Official Prosecuted

[The first prosecution of a former government official was announced. The state prosecutor of Slovakia preferred charges of "crimes against the security of the state" against Dr. Josef Lettrich, Slovak Democrat and former head of the council of ministers in semi-autonomous Slovakia. The Prague radio said action would be taken against anybody who made speeches in Slovakia against the state.

[Rude Pravo, Communist newspaper, said school officials at USI in northern Bohemia had been ordered to put pictures of Stalin in all schoolrooms.

[Zdenek Fierlinger, new minister of industry, said nationalization of all industries with more than 50 employes was the first thing on his program.

[An international Boy Scout group, which includes some American boys, was ordered dissolved. The chief Scout, a Dr. Plajnar, was reported under arrest. The Chief Girl Guide, Vlasta Joseova, resigned.

[Tension in Prague had given way to apathy. Most Czechs shrugged and appeared to have accepted the situation.]

to make loyalty checks on current and former civilian employes whose records are stored there. The Army explained "there were no instances of tampering with records in connection with the investigation."

A source here, however, declared the St. Louis center had become a "beehive" of subversive activity. This source said some suspects had been engaged in destroying records of Communists and fellow travelers who served in World War II.

Herter Proposes 4.5 Billion for ERP

Committee Leader, However, Would Add 2 Billion for Germany and Far East

Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.) came out yesterday for keeping the cost of the European Recovery Program to $4,500,000,000 for its first 12 months.

This contrasts with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's recent proposal of $5,300,000,000, a figure later indorsed by Chairman Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Herter's stand brought encouragement to other House Republicans, as well as some Senators, who have insisted on substantial cuts in the total. He said his figure was based on studies made for his Select Committee on Foreign Aid, which conducted a first-hand investigation of western European economic conditions last summer.

He also proposed to the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday, on the last day of its public hearings, an additional 2 billion dollars for relief to combat civilian "disease and unrest" in western Germany, China, Japan and Korea. He suggested authorizing this outlay in the same bill that provided for ERP.

Differs With GOP Chiefs

On this point, however, he found himself out of line with Republican leadership in the Senate.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), emerging from a closed meeting of the Republican Policy Committee, said no suggestion had been made to pool the China relief and other foreign aid in a single bill.

The committee decided on a floor schedule starting with the debate on ERP which opens Monday, then taking up taxes and Federal aid to education, and only then getting to relief for China and additional military aid for Greece and Turkey.

This means that as far as the Senate is concerned the advocates of aid to China have lost their fight to include it in the European recovery bill. Taft added, however, that he favored a rider on the Greek-Turkish measure which would also provide military aid for China.

Eaton Urges Prompt Action

On the House side Chairman Eaton said he thought the Greek-Turkish military program should be handled separately, but he urged prompt action on the 275-million-dollar request.

"I am in favor of the continued existence of the United States of America, and this is a necessary step to this end," said Eaton. He said the request should have come two months ago.

The last day's hearing of Eaton's committee brought Herter and other congressional witnesses to support the so-called Herter bill, which would put all foreign aid programs under the management of a Government corporation.

Herter explained that he would finance the $6,500,000,000 total of all foreign aid by (1) taking three billion dollars out of 1948 revenues as capital for the new corporation; (2) increasing the lending power of the Export-Import Bank by $1,500,000,000; and (3) appropriating two billion dollars from revenues in the 1949 fiscal year.

Walter Defends Britain

Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.) who went to England with the Herter group said that if the Herter plan were adopted the British would recover far more quickly than the "experts" imagined. He said he had no patience with the idea that the British people were not working hard.

"They're doing the best they possibly can with the tools in hand," he said. As for British socialism, Walter had this to say:

"I think it would be a very grave mistake if we were to indicate to the British people that we don't approve of their politics. The British government is strong. I don't think the British people would take their present austerity program from any other government."

The Eaton committee plans to meet in executive session Monday to start writing its bill.

5 Named to Select Raymond Clapper Award Winner

By the United Press

Five newspaper publishers and editors were named yesterday to select the winner of the fourth annual Raymond Clapper memorial award.

The $500 cash award and engraved scroll is given annually to the Washington correspondent whose work during the preceding year is judged closest to the ideals of fair and painstaking reporting characteristic of the late Raymond Clapper.

Judges will be Palmer Hoyt, editor and publisher, the Denver (Colo.) Post; Louis B. Seltzer, editor, the Cleveland (Ohio) Press; B. M. McKelway, editor, the Evening Star, Washington; Walter Annenberg, publisher, the Philadelphia Inquirer; and T. O. Thackrey, editor and general manager, the New York Post.

The award will be presented to the winner by President Truman at the White House Correspondents Association annual dinner March 6.

28 Organizations Protest Public Housing Lack in Bill

Twenty-eight national organizations yesterday protested to Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), against his failure to include a provision for public housing in his omnibus housing measure.

McCarthy, vice-chairman of the special Senate-House Committee on Housing, yesterday gave his proposed measure to the committee for consideration.

The measure leaves heavy emphasis on encouragement to private builders to construct low-rental housing.

The 28 organizations, which include representatives of many different religious groups, the AFL and the CIO, and National P-TA and the American Association of University Women, complimented McCarthy on much of the proposed measure.

"The position that you have taken on public housing is, however, a source of disappointment," the organizations said in a letter.

McCarthy's measure aims toward the construction of 1,500,000 new homes a year for the next two years. Over the first five years, it is estimated his program would cost the government more than one billion dollars.

To encourage private capital to invest in the lo wrental housing field, McCarthy proposed a guaranteed profit of 3½ to 5 per cent to the builder.

For investors who build homes or apartments renting for less than $50 a month in cities of 500,000 or more, or less than $40 elsewhere additional incentives are provided.

Builders would not have to pay income tax on their returns, and would be allowed 50 per cent depreciation for tax purposes. Federal aid would be given those communities which assisted the program with contributions of their own.

McCarthy's program is similar in most respects to the proposals outlined by President Truman in a special message to Congress last week. The Republican Senator consulted with many Administration leaders in the housing field during the drafting of his measure.

pital facilities:

"The total hospital bed requirement is 5000. This does not include quarters for mental patients. Against the requirement of 5000 beds, there are now available 3850 beds which leaves a deficit of 1150. Of the 3850 existing beds, 2000 are obsolete, unsafe or unsanitary.

"The new George Washington Hospital and the new Georgetown Hospital provide 450. The proposed hospital center will provide at the outside 1500. This total of 1950 new beds leaves 1200 more to be provided. In addition, there is a sizable remodeling job required to salvage the usable beds in our present hospitals."

FWA General Counsel Alan Johnstone said among eligible hospitals would be Columbia, Casualty, Sibley, Homeopathic, Children's and Providence.

Several witnesses told the subcommittee present hospital buildings in Washington include a number of fire traps. Dr. Herbert P. Ramsey, former chairman and now member of the Washington Metropolitan Health Council, said, "We have spent many sleepless nights wondering what would happen if fire broke loose in some of these institutions."

Two Md. Fliers Killed In Carolina Air Crash

Gatesville, N. C., Feb. 27 (AP).—Two Maryland fliers were killed here today when their old Navy SNJ trainer crashed.

The dead were identified as James Henry Aldridge, 35, and David Bradshaw, jr., 24, both of Cambridge, Md. Friends said they were on a pleasure trip in Aldrich's plane from Easton to Raleigh, N. C.

Aldrich, who was married and had a 14-year-old son, had been a flight instructor and mechanic for Maryland airlines for about six months. Bradshaw, who was also married, was employed at the Eastern Shore State Hospital and had taken flying lessons from Aldrich.

Army Reports Moral Approach Reduced VD Rates 40% in Year

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Army reported a "phenomenal drop" in its venereal disease rate yesterday and said it was due to substitution of "intelligent" appeals to the "higher moral sense of the individual" for the old emphasis on prophylaxis.

During the past 12 months, venereal disease incidence dropped 40 per cent in the Army as a whole, it was said, while among soldiers stationed in the United States the number of cases was cut more than half.

Mounting VD rates among soldiers just after the war caused the Army to establish venereal disease control councils here and at all posts. Chaplains, doctors, provost marshals, inspectors, personnel and public relations officers made up the groups.

"From the meetings of these councils," said the Army, "there emerged the well-rounded and integrated program now employed by the Army, based on moral, spiritual, psychological as well as objective factors.

"This broadened approach has supplanted prior concepts which emphasized the aspects of prevention, with the implication that the individual was not remiss as long as his illicit sexual relations did not result in infection."

Gone, it was said, is the old program in which soldiers were lectured by doctors who showed movies of the horrors of advanced stages of the diseases. The emphasis was on prophylaxis, and disciplinary action was taken only for failure to take such precautions.

Now the chaplain takes a prominent role in prevention, aided by the commanding officer and doctor. The appeal in regular lectures, movies and private talks is to clean living. Planned entertainment and activity programs help keep the soldier occupied during his off-duty time. His pay no longer is withheld if he becomes infected, and discipline is made discretionary with local commanders, regardless of whether prophylaxis was used.

Last month, said the Army, 1.3 men per thousand were admitted to treatment for VD during the average week, as compared with 2.2 in January, 1947.

Paper Seeks Aid in Giving Europe News

By The Associated Press

The New York Herald-Tribune, seeking to satisfy the "hunger of Europeans" for American news, has asked Congress to help.

The Herald-Tribune publishes a daily English-language edition in Paris. It wants to increase the circulation as a means of overcoming Communist propaganda. It wants Government aid in this.

The newspaper's position was discussed at hearings on the State Department appropriation bill, which were made public yesterday.

Currency Problem

Geoffrey Parsons, jr., editor of the European edition, told an Appropriations Subcommittee that the paper could not afford to increase circulation because of inability to convert most foreign currency into dollars or francs.

He said that 10 years before the war "our losses on the European edition totaled $770,000."

"And," he said, "by operating very frugally, our current loss is running around $15,000 a month."

Wants Facility Provided

"What is your plan for doing this?" Robinson was asked by Representative Stefan (R., Nebr.), chairman of the subcommittee.

"Our plan," Robinson said, "is to ask the State Department or the Army in the case of Germany at the moment, to provide a facility whereby we may exchange the currency that we get for the sale of the papers for francs or dollars.

"Also," Robinson continued, "we have suggested to the State Department . . . that embassies and consulates and information services of the State Department abroad need this paper desperately to supply information and they haven't got the funds now to buy them."

Circulation Is 50,000

Parsons said the present circulation of the Herald-Tribune's European edition is about 50,000, adding:

"We have a standng offer from German civilian distributors for 60,000 to 70,000 copies to sell to German civilians which we are helpless to do anything about."

Representative Rooney (D., N.-Y.), who commented that the newspaper is a "good one" to read "when you are in Europe," said the proposal, in effect, "really would be an appropriation out of the Treasury, and the question before the House is: 'What is it worth to Uncle Sam?'"

"Yes," Robinson agreed.

U. S. to Slam Door On Soviet Efforts To Join Parley

By the United Press

The United States will formally slam the door soon on all efforts of the Soviet Union and her satellites to get a voice in the current American-British-French conference in London, it was disclosed yesterday.

The conference of the three big western powers opened last Sunday. It is a consequence of the collapse of the Big Four Council of Foreign Ministers last December in London and the first formal step by the western powers to proceed in western Germany without Russia.

A State Department spokesman said yesterday the United States would reject all protests about the conference and rebuff all efforts by any of the eastern countries to be consulted.

The occasion was the receipt of a second Soviet protest asking that Poland, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia be consulted on Germany just as Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg are being heard.

The spokesman said yesterday there was no change in American policy.

Candy Kid Still Supports Straus

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE AND PLACES: Oscar Straus, the two-S waltz king, will be down to conduct Monday night's opening of "The Chocolate Soldier." . . . At 78, Straus is a natty example of how to have an income when you're old without making those dreary annuity payments: write yourself an operetta. In 30 years everyone will know all the tunes, and if there's one thing people will pay money for, it's to hear music they've already heard . . . 'Course, you've gotta have a song like "My Hero" to make it binding . . . Straus began conducting in 1885 in his native Vienna . . . No relation to the three-S Strauss composers (father and son), but he linked with them spiritually for the memorable "Three Waltzes," massively marred in this country, but an exquisite joy in Paris at the tiny Bouffes-Parisiens . . . Now there's a theater for you . . . We saw Straus there one night, tapping his toe to his own music . . . With the composer in the pit, the National should have quite a night Monday . . . Too bad the President isn't home.

MADELEINE CARROLL gets in this afternoon for tomorrow night's Red Cross broadcast from Constitution Hall of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." Brian Aherne will be playing Robert Browning to Miss Carroll's Elizabeth, and it's almost indecent to recall that he created the role opposite Miss Kitty all of 17 years ago this month, for, after all, Brian is a very fine actor.

CHARLES STARRETT another weekend visitor . . . Starrett switched some years back from playing ordinary leading man roles to horse operas, and he's become one of the ranking stars of that lively industry . . . Millions of kids know him as "The Durango Kid" and "Steve Collins" in those blood and thunder Westerns . . . He's here for a Connie B. Gay fiesta at Turner's Arena with "The Sunshine Boys," the Radio Ranchmen and Clyde Moody . . . His show tonight goes on at 9 and there'll be another tomorrow afternoon at 3.

FOUR AMBITIOUS amateurs, four, are wanted by Hecht's casting director, Carl Bleiberg . . . He wants them to play Brer Rabbit for the store's Easter preparedness drive . . . The jobs'll last three weeks, and if you think you can make like Brer Rabbit with some help from the make-up department, get in touch with Carl at National 5100, extension 5453.

IF YOU PLAN on seeing "Shoe Shine," you'd better catch it quick . . . The Italian film will be leaving the Little Tuesday night to make way for "Johnny Frenchman." . . . Five weeks is a short run for this superior film, but the pitch seems to be it's strong meat and people don't like to be reminded, with March 15 staring them in the nose, that it's a tough life.

SPIKE JONES screams from Youngstown that his "Musical Depreciation Revue" pulled in $11,000 in ONE NIGHT out there . . . Wonder what he'll pull into the National for those two weeks in mid-March . . . "Oklahoma!"—the one you saw here last summer—did a spectacular week in Youngstown and week's stay in Denver already is sold out to the tune of $85,000 . . . Connie Krueger bidding boodby to Loew's and those dates with Sam Jack Kaufman's band to join forces with American Railway Express . . . John Gielgud, freed from "Crime and Punishment," basking in the sun of Key West . . . Who was that extra chair reserved for at Boris Karloff's table at the Press Club the other lunchtime? . . . The Theater Guild's Bess Davis Schreiner girding her strength for production chores of the Women's National Press Club annual stunt party . . . Movie makers looking for a new Washington angle should grab Dorothy Cameron Disney's "Explosion," which was published yesterday . . . Tomorrow night's Community Education movie (91 20th st. at 8:15) is "Blockade," over which that Legion of Decency storm broke during the Spanish Civil war . . . The stars? . . . Henry Fonda, Leo Carillo and of course, Madeleine Carroll . . . It's Madeleine Carroll Sunday.

MOST AMUSING NEWSREEL shot of the week was one the boys didn't get at the Jackson Day dinner . . . On the Trans-Lux screen you see the vacant table at the Mayflower reserved for Senator and Mrs. Olin Johnston of South Carolina . . . The shot the boys might have gotten was of the Senator at the Statler half of the two-hotel event; at a hundred buck a head you're news if you pay and don't show, but you're bigger news if you're that close to the chowline and don't grab.

TONIGHT'S ARRIVALS: "Ice Cycles of 1948" begins a nine-night stay at Uline's tonight with Nadine Thompson and Margaret Field among the 80 good skaters of the year's first ice musical

Hedda Hopper's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD—Director Alfred Hitchcock has spent nine years here turning out distinquished pictures, his latest being "The Paradine Case." But the technique he is using on his present picture, "Rope," is as revolutionary as the addition of sound to the silent movies . . . I visited the Hitchcock set, and got the story from the cast, which included only nine actors. Among them are Joan Chandler, who was under contract to both Metro and Warners, and who is now under personal contract to Hitchcock; Farley Granger, who was so good in "Your Red Wagon"; John Dall and Douglas Dick. These youngsters put on such a rave about Hitch and the new method he is using, that it reminded me of the old days when working in studios was fun.

The story is a murder mystery based on the Loeb-Leopold case. The action takes place in an hour and a half (from 7 to 8:30 p. m.) in a New York apartment.

The setting is a mechanical dream. One long window, looking out on the New York skyline, shows fleecy clouds (made of spun glass) traveling along on separate wires and changing colors. The walls and furniture are movable. John Dall tells me that when he starts to sit down, there may not be a chair under him, but when he's in sitting position he always finds one there.

By careful preparation, Hitchcock shoots one of the picture's 10 reels each day. Each runs 10 minutes. The picture is being shot chronologically, one reel at a time. The crew is as excited about the new technique as are the actors.

In the film, Jimmy Stewart plays a limping Harvard professor, who solves the crime, which is revealed to him by the two young intelligent murderers while they are entertaining at a gay cocktail party. The feast is spread out on top of a trunk in which the murdered boy's body lies. The table is dressed like a bier with candles at either end. As the boy's father (whom they have invited to the party) leaves, they give him some first editions, tied up with the rope which strangled his son.

Tuck Vote Bill Is Advanced

solution he suggests is practicable or desirable. It is my hope that we can attain his objectives in a manner which will not sacrifice other inalienable rights that are equally as precous to Virginians, such as knowing by the ballot the name of the presidential candidate for whose electors he votes and the right to vote for any person regardless of the political banner under which he may be running."

Meanwhile, State Republicans hit at the Tuck proposal today before the House committee and State GOP Director Earle Lutz said he believed that marking the ballots with party designations would be a violation of the State constitution.

The Governor's bill proposes that the names of presidential and vice presidential candidates shall not appear on the ballot but only the names of the political parties and electors. The voter would merely elect electors who would be committed to the party nominee only if the State convention did not instruct them otherwise. Thus Virginia's 11 electoral votes could be withheld as an inducement to give the State more voice in national party councils.

GOP Advances Poll Tax Bill

possibly under a rules suspension requiring a two-thirds vote. Companion legislation has been given top priority in both House and Senate Judiciary Committees.

The Senate Republican Steering Committee meanwhile billed this heavy floor program ahead of any civil rights action: Starting Monday, the European recovery bill, followed by other legislation in this order: GOP tax-reduction bill. Federal aid to education, aid to China, and additional aid to Greece and Turkey.

On the Southern front meanwhile:

1. Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) denounced moves in Virginia and other Southern States to keep President Truman's name off the November ballot as "striking at the very root of our political democracy." Pepper said the proposed action would leave the choice with "a little group of party bosses," adding: "Surely wise leaders devoted to the principles of our democracy, the basic one of which is Government by the people, will not be so short-sighted . . ."

Party Reorganization Seen

2. Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) said he did not care to comment on President Truman's prospects in November but felt certain there would be a reorganization of the Democratic Party "during the period of the convention and election, or as an aftermath." George said he wasn't simply suggesting that the South have more to say about party management. Said the Georgian: "If the party is based on sound economic principles, and made truly a national party, we can rise above minority issues and sectional demands."

3. Representative Eugene Cox (D., Ga.) told the House "The President must be made to know that the spirit of resistance is not dead." Cox proposed the Georgia Legislature assembled in special session, and "deal" with the President's program, without waiting for a call from Gov. Melvin E. Thompson. He said the people of Georgia should express their views 'in one great State-wide mass-meeting."

Applies Only to Federal Office

The bill barring poll taxes as a prerequisite for voting for Federal offices in seven Southern States, passed last year by the House, was approved by a Senate Rules Subcommittee, 3 to 0. Rules Chairman C. Wayland Brooks (R., Ill.) and Subcommittee Chairman William E. Jenner (R., Ind.) predicted early approval by the full committee. Voting with Jenner to approve the bill were Senator John W. Bricker (R., Ohio) and Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.)

Senator John C. Stennis (D., Miss.) appeared to protest approval of the bill without hearings. Jenner said the subcommittee decided against hearings because "this matter has been explored fully by Congresses in the past."

In his statement to the committee, Stennis argued that State poll taxes do not keep "anyone who is really interested in his citizenship from voting."

Lamarre Tells Jury Meyers Feared Telltale Firm Records

with the Army Air Forces. Lamarre said the general even dictated phony letters to hide the fact that it was he who reaped some $150,000 out of the company's war business.

Detailing the events that led up to the frantic night time search through cartons of records of the company that had been dissolved a few months earlier, Lamarre told of a visit Meyers made to the Lamarre home in Dayton, Ohio, last July 11.

At that time, Lamarre testified, Meyers said he had been called before the Senate War Investigating Committee in connection with the war contracts of plane maker Howard R. Hughes.

By accident, the general himself gave the committee wind of the existence of Aviation Electric, the witness said. Meyers told him, Lamarre testified, that he had to wait a long time to be called as a witness, so every half hour or so he slipped across the street and had a drink.

"He told me he was sorry he had done it because he wasn't quite so alert as he should have been," Lamarre told the jury. "He told me he had mentioned Aviation Electric inadvertently before the subcommittee and was sorry he had."

Dictated Letter

But the general immediately set about making matters right, the witness declared. He dictated a letter to Mrs. Lamarre, the general's former secretary, concerning company business which was to be addressed to him and signed by Lamarre. Lamarre further got instructions, he said, to add a postscript in his own handwriting saying that if he had only taken the general's advice and not squandered his money, he wouldn't be in a position of asking for more money.

Mrs. Lamarre's stenographic notes of the letter were put into evidence, together with the general's reply.

Two days later, on July 13, right on the heels of the general's visit, Joseph N. Mannix, an investigator for the Senate war investigating group arrived at Dayton, Lamarre said.

The Government's witness told the jury that he gave Mannix the "concocted" version he had promised the general to tell.

Then he promptly telephoned Meyers to inform him just what the questions were and what answers he gave.

Apparently panicking at the way the committee was closing in, Meyers again flew out to Dayton on July 21, Lamarre said.

Meyers suggested the two of them go out to the plant where Aviation Electric had been housed, saying "he would like to check all the records to see if there were any reference to him to connect him in any way with the corporation," Lamarre testified.

At the plant they looked over some 30 cartons of books and records, Lamarre said.

"Finally he (Meyers) selected certain cartons he wanted to take back to the Hotel Van Cleve," Lamarre said.

Returned Next Day

Lamarre said he left the records with the general at the hotel and he did not know whether or not any documents or records had been removed. The next day Meyers sent the cartons of papers back to him in a taxicab, he told the jury.

And then a few days later, in August, Lamarre testified, the Senate investigator came back to Dayton with three representatives of the General Accounting Office and requested him to produce all the books and records of the company. They spent a week examining them, Lamarre said.

Soviet to End Denazifying Proceedings

Berlin, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Marshall Vassily D. Sokolovsky, commander of the Soviet occupation zone, today ordered the ending of all denazification proceedings effective March 10. It was regarded as one of the boldest Russian moves yet for German support.

British occupation officials quickly followed with an order paroling members of Nazi criminal organizations in their zone.

Sokolovsky also announced that former Nazi Party members who had been removed from their jobs but permitted to retain their right to vote would have the opportunity to regain their former posts "by honest and loyal work."

His special order of the day added that court proceedings against active Nazis and war criminals would be conducted by German criminal police and German courts.

American officials termed the Soviet denazification action "another weapon for the secret police."

They said that, although it appeared on the surface as a liberal move, the Soviet order actually deprives former Nazis of courtroom or commission action in any future appeals against police measures.

The Soviet claim that they had completed denazification proceedings in their zone was surprising, they said, in view of the fact 10,000 cases are still pending in the U.S. sector of Berlin alone.

[At Vienna Russia surprised the western power representatives in the Allied Council today with a demand for a general amnesty for minor Austrian Nazis. Last year a similar proposal made by the French was rejected by the Soviets.]

British Cruiser In Honduras; Tension Grows

Belize, British Honduras, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—The British cruiser Sheffield arrived today as tension grew over an alleged Guatemalan plan to invade this British crown colony.

British authorities here said the Sheffield had arrived to forestall any possible trouble resulting from renewed Guatemalan territorial claims on British Honduras.

(In addition, the cruiser Devonshire carrying troops of the Gloucester regiment, is speeding to British Honduras from Jamaica.

(In Guatemala City, the Guatemala government said it would protest to the United Nations against the British naval concentration at Belize, charging that it was an attempt to intimidate Guatemala.)

(The London foreign office said Britain "is sending British ships and British troops to British territory in British territorial waters to ensure the safety of British lives and British property. We hope they will not be needed."

(Guatemalan Minister Ydigoras Fuentes said today there was no "threat" of invasion "except in the mind of the governor of British Honduras.")

Intimacies Are Denied By Heiress

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 27 (U.P.).—The passages in French in her diary were perfectly innocent, 23-year-old heiress Gioia Grimditch explained in divorce court today.

Her husband, William H. Grimditch, jr., 25, charged the diary virtually contained admissions she was intimate with several men.

Mrs. Grimditch, heiress to the Jay Gould railroad fortune, read a passage dated July 27, 1946, and said the court's literal translation and her husband's interpretation were both wrong.

What was taken to mean that she had been intimate twice with Blake Brophy, son of a Phoenix banker, actually meant that she "got mad" twice at Brophy, Mrs. Grimditch said.

The entry read in literal translation:

"What a man. Just imagine. I asked myself, what will happen next. He says all the time I will dislike him, but I don't know how."

She said she meant, in referring to Brophy as "what a man" that she was angry at Brophy and not admiring him.

A French entry for August 30, 1946 was translated literally:

"If I would have a child, my gosh."

The heiress explained that after the birth of her daughter, May 28, 1946, she suffered occasional pains similar to labor pains.

"It was just a silly, fool girl's thoughts in her diary," she commented.

Mrs. Grimditch denied she had been intimate with Brophy or any other man but admitted she had "necked" Brophy and others. She brought numerous witnesses to testify that in her social set kissing was like shaking hands.

Bed Is Exhibit As Campbell Wins Divorce

London, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Sir Malcolm Campbell, 63, millionaire automobile and speedboat racer, won a conditional divorce from his third wife on an adultery charge today after he produced in court the mattress and pillows on which he said she misbehaved with a French count.

Campbell charged that Lady Campbell had an affair with Andre Louis Comte de la Salle.

For evidence, Campbell had a cream-colored mattress and light green pillows brought into the court. They were taken off the bed Campbell alleged his wife shared with the count.

Lady Campbell, 42, denied that she committed adultery. She said the count lived with her in her fashionable Chelsea apartment from May 11 to June 4, 1947, but that he slept on a settee.

The count was a business acquaintance, she said, and she offered him her hospitality because he had brought very little money with him from France.

Divorce Justice Sir Austin Jones said Campbell testified he entered his wife's flat last June 3 with "two inquiry agents" and found her partly dressed in a bedroom.

Campbell said he knocked on the bathroom door and a voice said in French:

"What do you want?"

Campbell said he replied—in French—"Open the door," and the count emerged wrapped in a towel.

The count looked Campbell over, according to the testimony, and commented: "I have seen you somewhere."

The inquiry agents said there was only one bed in the bedroom.

The Judge said each of the two pillows appeared to have been used by a different person and the bedclothes were "ruffled" on the night Campbell claimed he caught his wife with the count.

"I find it difficult to believe these two persons could have maintained such a close association without indulging in sexual intercourse," Jones commented.

Witnesses testified they heard giggling and splashing of water in Lady Campbell's bathroom early one morning.

"In my opinion," the judge said, "Lady Campbell and Count de la Salle were in the bathroom at 2 o'clock in the morning and in the bedroom at 2:30 a. m. and I find they committed adultery."

Campbell also divorced his first wife on an adultery charge.

Soviet Celebrates Centennial of Marx' Manifesto

Moscow, Feb. 27 (AP).—The Soviet Union celebrated today the hundredth anniversary of the Communist manifesto written by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels.

Pravda, said: "It has become the greatest material force transforming the destinies of our planet."

The army newspaper Red Star said: "Communism has broken through into the wide open spaces. Forward!"

"Bombs, even when atomic, never decided the outcome of war," Red Star added. "War is decided by human beings."

The trade union organ Trud said: "A hundred years ago there were not more than 300 Communists in the world. Today there are 20 million in the party."

(Marx and Engels, Germans, wrote the manifesto for a European Communist league in February, 1848. It calls for a workers' revolution to establish common ownership of the means of production.)

Stern Gang Kills 2 Poles On Suspicion

Jerusalem, Feb. 27 (AP).—A former Polish consul general and a former correspondent of a Polish news agency were shot to death by the Stern gang on suspicion of collaborating with Arabs, Jewish sources said tonight.

The bodies of the two Christian Poles were found in a deserted Arab quarter in Jerusalem early today.

They were unofficially identified as Witold Hulanitzky, the former consul general, and Stefan Arnold.

An Arab was slain in Jerusalem and British troops killed two Arab looters at Haifa. A British military patrol rescued a Jewish convoy from an ambush in the Gaza district and killed one Arab attacker and wounded two others. An Arab killed a Jew in front of the postoffice in Sfad.

Haifa was shaken by heavy explosions that demolished three evacuated houses.

The unofficial death toll in Palestine since the United Nations voted for partition November 29 rose to 1436.

Jews Willing To Risk Future Without U. N.

Lake Success, N. Y., Feb. 27 (U.P.).—The Jewish Agency announced in the United Nations Security Council today it was ready to risk forming a Jewish state in Palestine without the help of an international army if the U. N. refuses to mobilize one.

Moshe Shertok, agency political chief, told the Council the new American proposal for new Big Five consultations with Arabs, Jews and British "may jeopardize the implementation of the whole (partition) plan."

Shertok said Jews still believed an international army was "vitally necessary" for defending their state-to-be against Arab aggression.

Major requests made by Shertok were:

1. Lifting of the embargo on shipment of arms to Palestine Jews.

2. Assistance in the form of arms and possibly funds to outfit the prospective Jewish militia of Palestine.

3. Ban on the extension of Britain's mandate beyond May 15, the date set by the British.

4. Immediate council acceptance of partition and urgent Big Five talks on whether the situation is a threat to world peace.

Colombian Delegate Alfonso Lopez withdrew his proposal for a special session of the General Assembly to reconsider partition.

He said he was doing so because of American opposition.

(The U. N. Palestine Commission disclosed it had received a memorandum from the British government declaring:

("After 15 May, 1948, the United Nations Palestine Commission will be the government of Palestine.")

British Navy Cut To Operational Strength of 118

London, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—The British navy's operational strength has been cut to an estimated 118 ships, including 2 battleships, 4 aircraft carriers and 16 cruisers, Viscount Hall, Firs tLord of the Admiralty, said today.

These figures were revealed as former Prime Minister Winston Churchill announced the opposition will ask the Commons Monday to censure the Labor Government for an alleged lack of a coordinated and up-to-date system of national and imperial defense.

The operational fleet, as listed by Hall, was about one fourth as big as in November, 1945, just after the close of World War II. It was nearly twice as large as estimates earlier this week by the Royal Navy.

and is the leading local dairy in sales to restaurants and hotels.

Informed of the statements Ward made to reporters concerning his grand jury testimony, Elwood H. Seal, counsel for the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, and a former District Corporation Counsel, said "the association has no comment."

Derrick could not be reached for comment, and his office said he was out of town.

Composed of 1550 farmer members, the association has been in existence here in various forms since 1908.

In 1939, when Ward headed both Embassy Dairy and Fairfax Farms Dairy, the latter dairy was fined $10 on a charge of bringing milk from outside areas into the District without a permit.

This was part of the action leading to the Congressional investigation of 1939, which started as a probe of "bootleg" milk. During the inquiry, the Maryland-Virginia association was the target of charges made against it earlier, alleging "high pressure" tactics to control the milk supply here.

In 1933, and again in 1939, however, the association denied that it was fixing milk prices.

Another witness before the grand jury yesterday, William W. Mayes, owner of the Golden Rule Dairy of Silver Spring, later told reporters that under his contract with the Maryland-Virginia association he has to buy more milk than he needs.

Butter Prices Fail to Reflect Drops at N. Y.

Butter prices on the New York exchange dropped 2 cents yesterday, the second day in a row.

Results of the weak market will make no difference to the housewife here until at least after the weekend, local merchants said. Present stocks were bought at last week's prices, about 4 cents higher.

Grade A butter, the biggest seller, went from 81 cents a pound on the exchange Wednesday to 79 on Thursday and down to 77 yesterday. Grade AA fell similarly from 82 to 80½ to 78½.

Across the retail counters yesterday, Grade A stood at about 88 cents a pound, with AA about 2 cents higher. These prices reflected rises earlier in the week.

The egg market was steady, with some wholesalers predicting a decline soon as a result of greater production, Grade A fresh eggs were selling at retail near 65 cents yesterday.

Growing of Food In Sand Called Road to Plenty

Conway, Ark., Feb. 27 (AP).—An Arkansas professor of biology claims to have perfected a "simple" food-growing process he believes may be used to provide peace and plenty for the world.

It is a cheap method of growing plants in tanks of sterilized sand and feeding them by flowing chemical solutions through the sand to their roots.

The professor, Dr. E. A. Spessard of Hendrix College, said the process, known as "hydroponics," is not new, but that simplified equipment and chemical formulas he has developed open the way for practical utilization.

Rule on Brush Fires

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 27 (AP).—The rule against brush and refuse fires except between 4 p. m. and midnight goes into effect Monday. State Forester H. C. Buckingham today said any outside burning except in incorporated towns comes under the regulation. The regulation was made to help cut down brush fires.

Fleming Hits Bank Reserve Boost Plans

By S. Oliver Goodman

Robert V. Fleming took a backhanded slap yesterday at proposals to increase bank reserves.

Characterizing the proposals as impractical, the president and board chairman of Riggs National Bank foresaw possible "disastrous results on many banks" if the Federal Reserve Board is given the power to raise reserve requirements further.

Fleming, who is also vice president of the American Bankers Association's Federal Advisory Council, spoke at an ABA meeting in New York City.

The assailed plan would give the Federal Reserve Board power to require banks to maintain additional reserves up to 25 per cent against demand deposits and 10 per cent against time deposits.

"The operations of banks are so different. Reflecting as they do adaptation to the varying needs of their communities and customers, that no percentage of short-term Government security holdings can be applied fairly or practically to all banks," Fleming said.

"Any percentage high enough to offer any measure of restraint on a substantial number of banks will have disastrous effects on many other banks, compelling them to liquidate sound and necessary loans and thus actually check production. The very banks which have served their communities most aggressively and helpfully would be hardest hit."

Pointing out that the reserve boost plan "could not possibly direct credit into loans for constructive purposes or prevent loans for unnecessary purposes . . .," he said that the plan could succeed only in curtailing the amount of credit available for productive and nonproductive purposes alike.

UNRECONSTRUCTED: It happened the other night at Ma Statler's establishment. More than 500 General Tire & Rubber Co. dealers from the Southeastern region were carving on tenderloin steaks, exchanging fibs and listening to the music. Suddenly the orchestra swung into "Dixie." Bedlam reigned. At least 400 men stood up, broke into the Rebel Yell and wildly waved their napkins. Ma Statler, it is understood, has told the orchestra leader to refrain hereafter from certain refrains during meal time. Bad for the digestion, especially Yankees'.

STORE SALES LEAP: Promotion of Easter apparel and a break in the cold weather boosted Washington department store sales in week ended February 21 to 35 per cent ahead of same 1947 period. For four weeks ended February 21, local sales showed an 8 per cent upturn over the like period last year. Regionally, stores in Fifth Federal Reserve District hopped 38 per cent for week and 7 per cent for four-week period. The figures were reported last night by Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

Rural Libraries

Seventy million Americans—nearly half the population—now have inadequate library service or no library facilities at all. This is a challenge to a Nation that prides itself on its literacy, and a challenge that has been met in part by the Senate, which Wednesday passed the Aiken-Hill bill to provide rural library demonstration service. It is to be hoped that the House shortly will follow suit by approving the companion Jenkins bill. These measures, to be sure, will not in themselves correct the deficiency. Their purpose is to make available to States the means to demonstrate, through such devices as roving exhibits and bookmobiles, the advantages of library service and ways in which adequate library facilities can be obtained in rural areas. The plan calls for $25,000 in Federal funds per year for five years to be furnished for use by States submitting demonstration projects to the U. S. Commissioner of Education. States embarking on more ambitious programs may have their own funds matched by Federal appropriations up to a total of $75,000 per year.

Persons living in an urban area such as Washington, where good library service is a matter of fact, may have some difficulty envisaging the problem. Residents of huge areas throughout the country are completely without access to books. For example, 72 per cent of the people of North Dakota in 1945-46 had no library service whatsoever. Yet in Wyoming, a State hardly less rural in composition, only 1.1 per cent of the residents did not have library facilities. There are similar differences in State expenditures for library purposes. Outlays range from 10 cents per capita annually in West Virginia to $1.24 in the District of Columbia. Library circulation also varies from .53 in West Virginia to 5.48 books per capita each year in California. Obviously there is a long way to go before all Americans have equal opportunities for self-education, and any measure that helps lessen these discrepancies serves a constructive purpose.

OIT Controlled Exports

By the time the European Recovery Program comes into being the Office of International Trade of the Department of Commerce will have its expanded and tightened export control program in operation. That will be a tremendous advantage, for the launching of the ERP will be much less time-consuming with this vital export control agency already on the job.

During the early part of 1947 it was generally assumed that export controls were on the way out. Accordingly the number of commodities subject to control was cut almost in half and licensing policies were liberalized. But by the end of the year the situation had changed radically. The growing pressure of inflation at home and financial distress abroad, reflected in acute dollar shortages, make it imperative for us to maintain strict supervision over exports in order to protect the domestic economy from an undue drain on scarce supplies of essential commodities, see that exports are shipped to countries where the need is greatest, and prevent profiteering on the part of export industries.

Passage of the so-called Anti-Inflation Act at the end of December provided for an extension of export controls and also authorized the OIT to use "price criteria" in the licensing of exports. As a result the OIT promptly announced adoption of new licensing methods for specified commodities, based on competitive price tests, in place of the former historical basis for licensing. The price test has so far been applied only to a selected list of articles on the so-called positive list which are subject to licensing wherever exported. That list has recently been increased and may be further lengthened if shortages persist. Moreover, beginning March 1 licenses will be required for all shipments to Europe, including Russia and her satellites, whether or not the exported articles appear on the OIT's positive list. This expansion of the program will, it is estimated, bring under control another 25 per cent of our exports in addition to the 25 per cent subject to control at the end of 1947. The price test, however, is not to be applied to shipments to Europe, unless the goods in question are on the positive list of commodities designated as subject to price controls.

The purpose of this new comprehensive licensing program is threefold: (1) to channel supplies to those countries where they will make a maximum contribution to European recovery; (2) to prevent shipments of goods that might be used for purposes inimical to our welfare (obviously a political objective); and, (3) to insure effective utilization of supplies by European countries. In short, the licensing procedure will enable our officials to control the distribution of exported goods with reference to their use and the contribution made to European recovery.

Rather belatedly some members of Congress have been aroused by the OIT's new export control program, doubtless because of complaints from export groups concerned. As a result House and Senate Committees have been holding hearings on the subject this week. However, Congress itself has authorized the use of price criteria in granting export licenses. So the OIT cannot be charged with abuse of power. And it can assuredly put up a strong defense for extension of controls as a necessary protection against misuse and waste of the resources that the American people, at considerable sacrifice, are preparing to devote to the cause of European economic recovery.

Special Pleading

No one will be surprised that Representative Clarence Cannon took offense at our editorial, "Unfinished Business," on February 23. For years Mr. Cannon has been an implacable foe of any move to modernize the machinery and procedures of Congress. Especially obnoxious to him is the proposal, which our editorial supported, of abolishing the seniority rule and having committee chairmen selected for their special fitness and their reflection of the wishes of the party which they represent. No doubt there is good reason for Mr. Cannon's anger, for if this reform should be approved it would probably cost him the chairmanship of the Appropriations Committee when and if the Democrats regain control of the House.

But Mr. Cannon was not content to plead for retention of the outmoded and crippling seniority rule. He attempted to give substance to his carping by means that no fair-minded legislator would use. In the first place, he misrepresented what the editorial in question said. He changed our statement that several chairmanships of key committees of Congress are held by doddering old men to read: "several chairmanships of key committees of the House of Representatives . . . " That misquotation is especially inexcusable because the only specific reference we made to a committee being handicapped by senility was on the Senate side. His second below-the-belt thrust was the ridiculous intimation that the editorials which he implies helped to put through the constructive Reorganization Act of 1946 were ghost-written.

Our specific complaint about Chairman Taber of the Appropriations Committee, to whose defense Mr. Cannon rushed with such ardor, was that he is "sadly out of step with the most vigorous and constructive elements in the Republican Party." Had space permitted, we should have illustrated the point by recalling how Mr. Taber toured Europe last fall without seeing any "underfed people." We have yet to see any evidence that, even now, he is ready to draw upon American resources under the Marshall Plan to resist the Communist menace in Europe. It is this want of judgment and awareness of current problems in the chairman of the powerful Appropriations Committee that we deplore. No one that we know of has questioned his energy or diligent application; indeed, we ourselves have several times paid tribute to it. Apparently Mr. Cannon agrees with this characterization, for, while defending Mr. Taber for "aggressive, vigorous, intelligent, constructive leadership," he clung to the view that the appropriations chairman "is wrong oftener than he is right."

The net effect of Mr. Cannon's intemperate jibes, therefore, is to confirm his reactionary opposition to the strengthening of representative government and to illustrate his method of misrepresentation to buttress his charges. It is wholly appropriate that he was joined in his cantankerous lament by the best-known smear artist in the House—Representative John Rankin.

Trans-Jordan

A vagrant piece of news brings the name of Emir Abdullah into the turbulent picture of Palestine. Abdullah is King of Trans-Jordan, which became independent in 1946. It is the only Middle Eastern state that has not yet been admitted to the United Nations. It has always been said that Abdullah was aiming at a remerger with Arab Palestine (the combined area was an administrative unit after the World War I severance from Turkey) when the Palestine mandate was relinquished. He is as friendly to the Zionists as was his brother, Emir Feisal, who at the Versailles peace conference spoke of the "mutual interest" of the Jews and Arabs. For this friendship Abdullah incurred the enmity of the Grand Mufti and the unsavory characters around him who now dominate Arab Palestine. The Mufti, in handling Hitler's broadcasts from Berlin to the Middle East, used to refer to him as "Rabbi Abdullah." Abdullah, judging from the report, now has a representative in Washington.

Whether Abdullah is seeking American recognition or whether he is making his Palestine views known in Washington there is no means of knowing. The State Department denies all knowledge of the emissary's whereabouts. Officially, of course, he is nonexistent, and this, together with the possible embarrassment that publicity would create, may explain the general secrecy. It is clear, however, that whatever his views, the Emir cannot endanger his present ties with the Arab League so long as the United States policy on Palestine remains confused. If the United States doesn't know where it is going, how could it be expected that the Emir, bent as he might be on pacification, could take a chance?

Southern Portent

The signs begin to multiply that the Democratic Party, so long comprised of incongruous elements held together by traditional loyalties and the hope of patronage, may be in the process of fission. The latest sign is the dramatic appearance of Governor Tuck of Virginia before the Legislature of that State, to ask for an amendment to the election laws, that would relieve the Democratic presidential electors from Virginia of any obligation to vote for the candidate nominated by the national convention of the party. It seems not unlikely that a similar action will be taken in some of the other Southern States.

The situation is further complicated by the surprising strength shown recently in New York by another set of schismatics who are supporting the third-party movement of the Messrs. Wallace and Taylor. This movement represents the more radical and revolutionary fringe of the New Deal and obviously has a considerable strength among certain sections of the urban proletariat, which have broken free of the party machines and have been reorganized under the leadership of the Communists and their fellow travelers. In New York at least Mr. Wallace appears able to draw enough votes from Mr. Truman to throw the State with its 47 electoral votes to the Republican candidate, and it is by no means certain that he cannot do the same thing in other important States such as Illinois, Michigan, California, and Washington. Thus the defection of the South would be well-nigh fatal to Mr. Truman's hopes of another term.

By and large the Southern schismatics represent what is left of the Jeffersonian tradition. Their rupture with the Administration has been precipitated by Mr. Truman's determination to use the Federal power to put an end to racial discrimination in both politics and industry. In this the Southerners are likely to have at least tacit sympathy from conservative Democrats in other parts of the country who consider racial discrimination an evil of much lesser magnitude than the further extension of the Federal powers over local affairs. Those who consider the abolition of all racial discrimination to be the most urgent and necessary of domestic reforms are as likely to be attracted into the Wallace camp as into Mr. Truman's, especially since it is fairly obvious that Mr. Wallace and his clique have succeeded in forcing Mr. Truman's hand in the matter. The Republicans, too, may be expected to make an appeal to the more conservative Negro voters in the Northern cities, and in addition to matching Mr. Truman's promises, will be able to cite the traditional solicitude of their party for the interests of the Negro race.

All this appears to leave Mr. Truman without any major domestic issue on which to wage his campaign. If there is prosperity, he can scarcely claim credit for it in the face of his predictions of inflationary disaster. If there is depression, he will be blamed for it despite all his disclaimers or recriminations. Whether Mr. Truman will be able to wage an effective campaign solely on the issue of his foreign policy depends, of course, upon whether the Republican convention nominates a candidate with a quasi-isolationist philosophy like Mr. Taft's or one with an internationalist point of view like Mr. Vandenberg's. In the latter case, indeed, Mr. Truman would be at considerable disadvantage, since his party must carry the onus for blunders of American diplomacy. On the other hand it is not impossible that Mr. Taft's isolationism might commend him strongly to whatever may be left of the Midwestern Populist movement.

The twelfth amendment and the local interests of political machines have operated to keep American political parties in existence long after they ceased to represent any particular causes or even any general political doctrines. These factors, however, have not always been powerful enough to prevent disintegration of parties by acute internal stresses. Thus the Republican (Jeffersonian) Party, after a long period of power, split, after the election of 1824, into National (Whig) Republicans and Democratic (Jacksonian) Republicans. The Whig Party fell apart after its success in the election of 1848 and a few years later disappeared from American history.

Unsociable Americans

Disturbing signs indicate Americans are losing their good old slaphappy sociability. The front porch is becoming an anachronism, builders report. Nobody wants to sit on it any more and wave to passersby. And railroads are carrying empty lower and upper berths while passengers who want to ride in snooty aloofness from fellow travelers wait weeks to get roomettes and bedrooms. Most new sleeping cars are of the private room type. Indeed, the day may not be far off when the person who can tell of his travel adventures in an upper berth will be in the same class as the covered wagon raconteur.

As the open spaces disappeared in this country and people began getting in each other's hair, it was inevitable that walls of privacy would begin to rise, as they have in older nations. Yet there is no reason to fear all Americans are becoming brooding introverts. Many long-distance bus passengers still tell each other how the country ought to be run, and exchange domestic and heart confidences. And the masses that gather for any kind of a parade or bargain sale, or for a glimpse of a movie star are evidence that there are plenty of people left who like to brush elbows with their kind.

"Palestine In The Air"

Surely you are mistaken in your editorial of February 26 in quoting Premier Ramsay MacDonald as having said anything, let alone on Palestine, in 1938. He died in November of the previous year.

American Rights Abroad

In your issue of February 18 a dispatch from Seoul described an incident which is becoming an almost daily occurrence in the papers of our country. I am referring to the "roughing" of the two United States Army majors in the north Korea Soviet headquarters city of Pyongyong.

A single incident in itself is sometimes excusable, but the multiplicity of these occurrences indicates a general world-wide trend to intimidate American citizens abroad. Especially does this appear to be true in areas under Soviet auspices. The apparent resignation of our Government would have aroused incredulity prior to the past war. This apathy is reportedly incredible to the peoples of eastern Europe. They find it difficult to believe that a country so powerful and influential as the United States would allow the continued abuses of its nationals by hostile elements.

Only recently has the Immigration Bureau begun to bother with keeping track of Russian aliens in this country. These foreign nationals have complete freedom of movement, whereas even our embassy officials are reported to be under constant surveillance of secret police. Press representatives behind the iron curtain may interview only "authorized persons."

For many decades the United States citizen—like the dollar bill—has been accepted almost universally without reservations. This has been due in the main to the good faith and integrity of our Government. Likewise, the Government has in the past upheld a policy of everywhere protecting the lives and privileges of its citizens.

Our Government is committed to the obligation of international protection of its peoples by the very reason of its existence. Is it not a proper demand that they receive this protection?

Woman Suffrage

At the recent Women's Bureau celebration of the centennial of the first women's rights conference Representative Stevenson of Wisconsin delivered an address in which he stated that the man who seconded Elizabeth Cady Stanton's motion that women "secure to themselves the sacred right of the elective franchise" was "Frederick Douglass, a Scotsman." This demands correction.

For a long time the men and women who believed in woman suffrage had planned a meeting at Seneca Falls, N. Y., at which this question should be discussed and ways and means of securing suffrage for women be devised But when the meeting was called and Mrs. Stanton made the motion, not a single delegate had the courage to second it. Those who had been its staunchest advocates declared such a revolutionary measure would be "untimely and unwise."

However, there was at that meeting one single human being through whose veins the blood of Africa flowed. He was Frederick Douglass, a run-away slave, but a short time out of bondage with a price set on his head. Douglass arose and seconded Mrs. Stanton's resolution urging suffrage for women. And it was largely through Frederick Douglass' masterful arguments and matchless eloquence that Mrs. Stanton's motion was carried in spite of the strong opposition of its powerful foes.

The women of this country owe a debt of gratitude to Frederick Douglass which it would be hard to repay. At the risk of doing an inreparable injury to himself personally and to the cause of abolition, so dear to his heart, he did everything in his power to secure the elective franchise for them, so that they would no longer be classed with infants and idiots and criminals.

When the sixtieth anniversary of that first Woman's Rights Convention was celebrated in 1908 in Seneca Falls a bronze tablet was placed with this inscription: "On this spot stood the Wesleyan Chapel in which the first Woman's Rights Convention in the world's history was held, July 19, 20, 1848. Elizabeth Cady Stanton moved this resolution which was seconded by Frederick Douglass: That the women of this country secure to themselves the sacred right of the elective franchise."

Tiger And Mouse

In an address some time ago, Sir Carl Berendsen, New Zealand Minister to the United States, observed that the United Nations was equipped to act against an obstreperous mouse but not against a marauding tiger.

We now know that the United Nations is helpless against a marauding tiger—the USSR. Will it now be proved that the United Nations is also helpless against an obstreperous mouse—the Arab states? S. K. C.

Painless Pay Raise

Here is a painless and practical plan which will give all Government employes a 10 per cent wage increase without any increased cost to the Government and reduce the number of personnel required for the efficient and economical operation of the Government.

At present the Government operates on an eight-hour day, five-day week schedule. Employes are allowed 26 days' annual leave and 15 days' sick leave per year. Also, there are seven nonwork holidays each year, and when you consider that on the average one holiday out of seven comes on Saturday, which is already a nonwork day, this means that on the average, Government employes get off from work six days a year for holidays. Thus the actual number of days worked per year is 213.

The allowance of annual and sick leave for Government employes is in excess of commercial practice for similar types of work. To conform to commercial practice, annual leave should be reduced to three weeks (15 days) and sick leave should be reduced to one week (five days). This would increase the number of days worked by 21, or approximately 10 per cent.

A 10 per cent increase in pay coupled with a 10 per cent in time worked would result in no increased cost to the Government. It would enable many Government employes to give up part-time non-Government work now necessary to their livelihood. It would still provide adequate time for social, civic, religious and recreational activities. J. P. SHEDD, Jr.

"Population Again"

It appears from your February 13 editorial, "Population Again," that a battle of statistics is in progress between the National Committee on Immigration Policy and the Population Reference Bureau of Washington.

For the first organization Mr. Henry Miller and Dr. William S. Bernard contend that without immigration our population will begin to decline by 1990; that admission of 150,000 immigrants a year up to that time would only postpone the catastrophe by a decade; that admission of double that number would still leave a static population in the year 2000, but there would be 14 million more of us than if we had no immigration whatever.

Mr. Guy Irving Burch for the second organization demands to know "why if the Soviet Union can increase its birthrate without assistance from immigration, the United States cannot do the same."

Your editorial writer then throws in the sponge with the argument that the way to increase the birth rate is to go back to the farm.

The tremendous importance of demographic problems justifies the submission of some considerations of a fundamental nature which appear to have been overlooked by all three of the protagonists.

Benjamin Franklin had the percipience to observe: "The importation of foreigners into a country that has as many inhabitants as the present employment and provisions for subsistence will bear will be in the end no increase of people. Nor is it necessary to bring in foreigners to fill up any occasional vacancy in a country; for such a vacancy (if the laws are good) will soon be filled by natural generation."

This is quoted with approval by Dr. Raymond Pearl in his The Biology of Population Growth, published by Knopf in 1925. In that book Pearl showed that a population, whether of yeast cells, fruit flies or people, follows a cycle of growth fitting the same curve as that of the growth of a rat, a squash or the regenerating tail of a tadpole. He took the census figures of Sweden, which cover the longest period of census figures extant, and the curve fitted. He got the same result with England, France and the United States and with the three combined. Germany and Japan were exceptions but only in the sense that when industrialization began they started a new asymptote at the lower end of the curve indicating the beginning of a new cycle.

The graph of the logistic equation is in the form of an elongated "S"—the letter—with both ends pulled out. The equation for the U. S. gave the upper asymptote at 197,274,000 in the year 2100. Which means that "in the present cycle"—and that is important—our population would stabilize at that figure in that year. Since the curve was evolved 23 years ago the writer was curious to investigate how it accorded with current census figures. The census of 1940 showed 131,669,275 and the increase to July 1, 1947 (estimated), was 11,003,487, which placed both observations exactly on the curve.

Pearl cautions about projecting prophecy too far into the future since growth occurs in cycles and anything that might alter the terms of subsistence could begin a new one. If there is any truth in the rumors we hear of crops of wheat grown in nine days—such a development, for example, would enormously increase the potential for a larger population.

Just as immigration does not affect the rate of growth by increasing it so emigration does not sensibly decrease it. By the census of 1940 there were in this country 445,070 individuals who had been born in Sweden. There were 1,301,390 people of Swedish stock; that is either born in Sweden or native-born of Swedish or mixed parents. Immigration from that small country has been continuous for many years, yet the 1940 population calculated according to Pearl's equation should be 6,446,000 and it actually was 6,341,343. The facts might be accounted for by the statement that immigrants take the places of the children that without immigration would have been born and emigrants are replaced by children that without emigration would not have been born.

There may be many arguments for immigration and as many against; the subject is not an issue here. What is to be emphasized is that its effect on population, barring racial and cultural factors and restricting the matter to numbers only, is nil. If Pearl's work has ever been invalidated by subsequent studies this writer for one would like to be enlightened.

Overworked Officials

By Malvina Lindsay

Social Proxies Needed

THE TIME seems to be approaching when only a man or woman of prizefighter age and physique will be able to stand up to the strain of being a high public official. Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York, who is undergoing a rest cure for a heart condition and extreme fatigue, is a case in point. His illness emphasizes a problem that is giving governmental circles in Washington and elsewhere much concern.

It is: How can an official carry on a demanding, responsible job and at the same time review parades, open fund-raising campaigns, speak at banquets, shake hands endlessly at receptions, dedicate buildings, present keys and turn switches, crown beauty queens, receive delegations with giant tomatoes, entertain visiting bigwigs, and carry on all the rest of the public stunts demanded of those in the limelight?

The New York mayor, when he went to the hospital, canceled attendance at several dinners, participation in a parade, inspection of some new railway cars, and several similar engagements. He had been making nightly rounds in his extracurricular activities, though it required 11 hours of his day just to clear his desk.

THINGS PILE up much the same way on the President of the United States, on many Governors, mayors, members of Congress, other public officials whose prestige is desirable to political, social and commercial groups. And all this at a time when the gravest and most far-reaching of public decisions must be made.

The British government has come to grips with the problem in its Washington Embassy. In order that its new ambassador, Sir Oliver Franks, can give all his efforts to important economic negotiations, it has named a Minister to relieve him of routine obligations, including social ones.

President Roosevelt escaped many outside demands because of his semi-invalidism. Another public figure who profited from physical handicap was Florence Nightingale. Returning to England from her nursing in the Crimea broken in health, she took to her bed and carried on effectively nearly a half century of social reform from that vantage point. Some of her biographers indicate that she made the most of her illness in order to weed nonessentials out of her life.

This suggests that it might be best to elect only the bedridden to office if taxpayers want to get their money's worth of service in essential matters.

ANOTHER way out might be to hire a King or Queen—of whom there are plenty now unemployed—to do the bazaar opening and the equivalent for the President. But a more expansible plan would be for every public person of importance (in fact, everyone who has any real work to do) to have a social proxy or alter-ego in charge of minutia. How to glamourize such a person to make him, or her, acceptable to the public would present a problem, but with the aid of modern promotion and advertising this could no doubt be done. In fact, movie stars might volunteer for terms of public duty in this field.

Such procedure of course would involve the risk of making the public personage become so remote and exalted he might develop a Jove complex—as has sometimes happened. And the social proxy making the rounds of the parties and picnics would very likely become the political hero of the hour.

President Andrew Jackson, who opened the White House to the common man, had the democratic idea of bringing the Executive closer to the electorate. But since Jackson's time this has become a more complex task—it was no easy one then. Outside pressure on the President and many other public officials has become so great they are faced with the choice of devoting themselves to the interests of all the people—which requires rest and meditation as well as desk work—or to those of the few who can get their attention.

Arms For The Jews

Since November 29, 1947, when headlines announced that the U. N. had reached an agreement on a major problem, the partitioning of Palestine, newspapers have been carrying daily accounts of flagrant violations of the U. N. decision by the Arabs.

Our Government has imposed an arms embargo on the Middle East. This serves only to strengthen the hand of the Arabs, who are openly receiving arms from the British as well as the United States, which had been shipping them to Yemen, technically considered not in the Middle East.

Our Government, which was foremost in the move for partition of the Holy Land, is morally and duty bound to heed the cry for aid coming from the Jews in Palestine. The people there are ready and willing to defend themselves. We must see to it that the Jews in Palestine have the means with which to defend themselves against the rapine and murder of Nazi-led Arabs, under the command of the Mufti.

The Arab cause is an assault against the democratically arrived-at decision made by the world's highest tribunal. It was not the Jews who decided on partition, but the United Nations. Our Government holds the key to the proper equipment of the Jewish militia. In our long history, the United States has not hesitated to send arms and military missions to other parts of the world to back up its foreign policy; and it should not hesitate now.

Reservoir Of Good Will

WHILE YOU may not have guessed it from the headlines, this is American Brotherhood Week. With hand grenades selling at 60 cents in Jerusalem and with the Communist police in Prague squeezing out the breath of a once vigorous democracy, there seems little enough brotherhood in the world.

Childs

But the headlines do not tell the whole story. As so often in the past, the irony is that ordinary men and women seem to have so little to do with the plots, the intrigues, the violence, the hatreds that are carried on by those who occupy the seats of power.

Here in America, as the political name-calling grows more and more shrill, it is important to remember that. I think it could be demonstrated that never before in this country was there such overflowing good will toward those in need, whatever their race or creed.

It takes many forms. The Friendship Trains continue to roll toward the ports, even though it was six months ago that Drew Pearson first sparked the popular imagination with that brilliant idea. They carry the bounty of the American people freely given. When the food is distributed in France or Italy or whatever, no one asks the politics of the families who receive it.

THE OTHER DAY Secretary of State George C. Marshall heard about a new kind of Marshall Plan. He listened while the members of a troop of Boy Scout Cubs from Bethesda, Md., told him of their plan to earn money so they could send food to a Boy Scout troop in France.

The photograph taken of that session was a classic. There was Secretary Marshall, whose true greatness is reflected in the dignity and simplicity of everything he does, talking with those youngsters.

Of course, it was planned. Those things do not happen without planning. But the idea originated with the boys themselves, and that is the important thing.

The Scouts will use that swiftly growing institution, CARE, to send food to Scouts across the seas. CARE is the simplest and quickest way to get food to the hungry aboard. Nearly three million dollars worth a month is being sent overseas in $10 CARE packages.

A former Army Air Force flyer wants to help rebuild the town he bombed in France. In a number of American towns that bear European names, people have come together to send clothing and food to the namesake cities overseas. Instance after instance comes into the news to show how deep is the reservoir of brotherly feeling.

However, it seems at times difficult or impossible to translate this widespread good feeling into political action under our form of government. This is true even though it is fairly certain that Congress will pass a European aid program on a scale never before dreamed of. It is true when action is measured against the magnitude of need in a period of revolutionary change.

AN ISSUE that tests how far the sense of brotherhood extends is the proposal to admit 100,000 displaced persons a year into this country for four years. Representative William G. Stratton of Illinois has for many months been pushing a bill to do that. It has wide support from organizations and individuals, yet it seems impossible to get action.

By such a step, pressures would be relieved everyhere. It would immeasurably simplify the problem of Germany and Palestine. This is true even though most of the Jewish refugees, who make up only 30 per cent of the total of displaced persons, are determined to go to Palestine instead of the United States. Quite apart from providing homes and employment for thousands now pensioners, the admission of displaced persons into this country would set an example to other nations that have also held back.

The chief reason for the reluctance is obvious. People feel insecure. They fear their jobs will be threatened by newcomers who may work for less money.

It is this same insecurity that breeds the frustration and the fear out of which come our own hate groups. Those hate groups would turn brother against brother. They are the real enemies of America and the American way of life.

The reservoir of good will, of brotherly love, in this country is a reality. If it is dissipated by political ineptitude and political indifference, the world will be a far poorer place.

Unified Germany

By Sumner Welles

Letter To A Congressman

MY DEAR Mr. Congressman:

I have received your letter of February 4 in which you take issue with my recent column on our policy in Germany.

In your opinion my article represents "a very inconsistent and shortsighted viewpoint on how Germany, as a nation, should fit in the European picture." You say, "We made our basic mistake when we failed to insist that Germany remain a unified nation."

I wonder if you are familiar with A. L. Rowse's analysis of the German mentality. It seems to me altogether accurate: "Those who know Germany know that there is something in the German people that responds to barbarism, that likes kicking a man when he is down, that does not mind torture and brutality, that respects success at all costs, thinks breaking your word is a sign of cleverness, and aggression is a sign that you have Providence on your side, and that rejoices at the thought of being on the side of the big battalions and does not care who goes to the wall."

WE ARE witnessing the same attempt to persuade us that the German people are not responsible for Germany's crimes as that so successfully made in 1920. Only, instead of the Kaiser, we are now told that it is Hitlerism that should be blamed.

The truth is, of course, that the Nazis were merely the inheritors of an immensely powerful German tradition and that Nazism was "the degeneration and vulgarization of the intellectual tradition of Germany." That tradition was epitomized by the philosopher Fichte, the inspiration of German nationalists and militarists, when he proclaimed: "We want so to educate the citizens of the state that they shall be incapable of willing anything other than the state wills them to will."

In 1918 the western democracies tried the experiment of letting Germany remain a unified nation under a centralized government. They assumed that the democratic system that Germany then adopted would prove a safeguard to the rest of the world. The results proved how disastrous that assumption was.

YOU SAY in your letter, "A unified Germany in the past has been dangerous to world peace in direct proportion to its military potential. But under a continuing Joint Allied Commission with proper safeguards and restrictions the war potential could be entirely eliminated."

But that, of course, is exactly what was tried so unsuccessfully after the First World War. Because Great Britain, France and the United States failed to maintain a common front, the Joint Allied Commission that was supposed to eliminate Germany's war potential was worthless. From the moment the Treaty of Versailles was signed the Pan-Germans and the militarists embarked upon their plans for rearmament. Their plans succeeded because disagreements among the victorious Allies prevented any effective control, because the German people were subordinated to a centralized government which they had been educated blindly to obey, and because that government was able to regiment them, their industries and their farms, for war.

What reason have we to believe that the German people, today far more gravely poisoned than in 1919, will not again follow that course if granted the same treatment as before?

AS AN additional argument for unification, you maintain that if Germany is unified she "could pay the reparations of war." The peace of the world seems to me more important than reparations. But, in any event, you must remember that after World War I, when Germany was unified, she continually evaded her reparations obligations, and actually paid in reparations less than the loans she obtained, particularly from the United States.

If we can learn by experience, we will see that the only solution that promises future peace is to be found in the unswerving cooperation of the western Allies in the application of controls, in the creation of a decentralized German federation, and in the restoration of the historic German states with sufficient autonomy to permit these individually to cooperate with their non-German neighbors.

I agree with you that economic unity within Germany is desirable. But I do not agree that this should preclude the entrance of the individual states into political arrangements with other European countries.

I BELIEVE that the only permanent solution for the European problem is to be found in a United States of Europe. I do not believe that a United States of Europe can exist if we once more permit Germany to become a politically unified nation under a highly centralized government.

Certainly, as you say, the present division of Germany between the Russian and the western zones makes it impossible to begin any immediate program for an over-all settlement. But surely in the meantime much that has not yet been done could be done by the United States to attempt to reeducate the German people, and to lay the foundations for that kind of a political and economic system within the zones occupied by the western powers which will encourage, rather than discourage, the integration of a federated Germany into a United States of Europe.

Will we advance either our own safety or the peace of Europe by persisting in a policy which is already making for disunity between the western Allies, and which furthers the reconstruction of precisely the same kind of Germany as that which was responsible for the two world wars?

Benes Memoirs

Czech Leader Pushed Cooperation With Russia

(Second of a Series)

By Dr. Eduard Benes

President of Czechoslovakia

In Czechoslovakia we watched the events of 1934-37 with mounting fear and worry. I felt horrified at this spectacle of Europe's collapse. Again and again I asked myself where it all could end. I felt almost physically, how, piece by piece, the life work of Masaryk and myself was crumbling. Yet until the day of Munich, I never gave up my hope that somehow it would be possible, by some act, to reverse the trend and prevent a new European war. I, therefore, did everything within my power to prevent the catastrophe.

In 1935, when President Masaryk resigned and I was elected President, I felt that Europe was rushing toward a great conflict. I knew that we could not avoid being drawn in, for it was certain that the conflict would arise in Germany. I, therefore, decided to give first place to building up our army, and threw myself into this work with more energy than I had given to anything else before.

My second task was to strengthen and rescue what could still be saved in our system of alliances. As President, I made three official trips, to Romania, Yugoslavia and France. I went to Romania for the Little Entente session on June 6 and 7, 1936. I found there the first open break in the Little Entente, due to the Yugoslav regent Prince Paul.

On my official trip to Yugoslavia (April 5 to 7, 1936), I was received with enthusiasm by the Yugoslav people, but dryly and confusedly by the Yugoslav dictator and his soldiers, formerly so enthusiastic about the Little Entente . . . I became convinced that official Belgrade was already completely over on the other side. They declared . . . that if there should be war among the great powers, Yugoslavia would remain neutral. I asked whether they could for one moment think that they could avoid being drawn into a war in which Germany and Italy fought . . . I added that in Prague we cherished no such naive illusions . . . They remained neutral exactly as long as it was convenient toward "appeasement." The critical moment came on April 10, 1938, with formation of the Daladier government, with Bonnet as Foreign Minister. This government reoriented French policy away from its central European alliances . . . Already the whole of central Europe—except for us—no longer had any common policy with France.

We and the Soviet Union were thus left completely alone in the political camp of those who were basically, openly and decisively anti-Fascist and anti-Nazi.

After we concluded the 1935 treaty of alliance with Russia we kept in constant contact. Nothing interrupted our exchange of opinion and coordination of policies.

On May 30, 1935, a Czechoslovak military delegation left for an official visit to the Soviet Union and inaugurated the first air-force cooperation with Moscow. In August of the same year a Soviet army delegation, headed by General Shaposhnikov, participated in our first large-scale maneuvers.

In September, 1935, a delegation of the Czechslovak army, headed by the chief of our general staff, General Krejci, attended the big maneuvers of the Soviet army and returned, enthusiastic from the military standpoint, over what they had seen in the Soviet Union. General Krejci declared that "the Red army, its discipline, its high morale and its equipment compel the admiration of every military expert" . . . In the West, at this time, they refused to believe our evaluation of the Soviet army.

We tried several times from Prague to arrange closer political and military cooperation between the West and the Soviet Union. For example, in 1938 we were asked by the Soviet minister in Prague to help persuade the West (especially France) to contribute to the equipment of the Soviet navy. I tried, insisted again, emphasized the importance of such aid—all in vain. I was forced to conclude that the people then making French decisions obviously had no desire to contribute.

Seeing the feverish war preparations of Germany we arranged important deliveries of certain special arms from our armaments factories which the Soviet army was unable to obtain from France or elsewhere. In the summer of 1937 another Soviet military mission came to Czechoslovakia. Certain measures were taken and we reached several accords, especially on Soviet air aid in case of an attack by Germany.

After the Soviet military mission's visit, a similar Czechoslovak mission was sent to the Soviet Union. The written report of that mission on the military situation of the Soviet Union was, during the Second World War, an invaluable reference aid for our important evaluations of the military potentialities of the Soviet Union.

Soviet diplomacy made several strong efforts to arrange meetings for an exchange of views on the common defense of European East and West against the Fascist attack. We were always ready to join any such meetings. However the Soviet efforts with the French and the English failed completely up to the end of September, 1938.

After the May mobilization in 1938 I agreed that our chief of the general staff, General Krejci, should approach General Gamelin directly on concrete measures for coordination of the Czechoslovak and French mobilization. General Gamelin replied that he had no instructions. No further news and no invitation for our soldiers to come to Paris ever arrived. Thus, shortly before the Munich crisis, we became convinced that the French either did not wish or could not prepare anything.

In the matter of military preparations for direct defense against Nazi attack, in September, 1938, we stood completely alone with the Soviet Union.

At this moment Europe was ripe, in every respect, to accept without protest the diktat of Berchtesgaden. When Czechoslovakia decisively rejected that diktat, it received from Britain and France on September 19, 1938, a joint note demanding that we accept the capitulation arranged between Hitler and Chamberlain September 15 in Berchtesgaden. When we refused, there came from France and England an ultimatum that if we did not accept their plan they would abandon us. It was clear that France and England would not go to war merely "to keep the Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia."

At Munich on September 30, in the night, our state and our people were clubbed on the head. Without our participation and in spite of the mobilization of our entire armed force, the four great powers forced on us the Munich pact, fatal for Europe and the whole world.

Truman Unalarmed by Revolt

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Reporter

Key West, Fla., Feb. 27.—If President Truman is alarmed over the "revolt" of Southern Democrats, he gives no evidence of it.

He must be well aware of what is happening in this respect. The Miami Herald, which was delivered to him before breakfast this morning, carried a banner that said, "South Moves for Blow at Truman."

The story related how Gov. W. M. Tuck of Virginia asked the Legislature for a law which would keep the names of presidential candidates off the ballot next November, making it possible for Old Dominion leaders to withhold the State's 11 electoral votes from Mr. Truman.

Eben Ayers, Assistant White House Press Secretary, told reporters this afternoon that Mr. Truman had not bothered to communicate with Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

The Gallup Poll

World Crisis Is Not Causing Much Rise in War Fears

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 27.—Despite gathering of diplomatic storm clouds over Europe and Asia, fear among voters of another world war has not grown appreciably.

Events in Czechoslovakia, Palestine, Greece, Korea and China have received considerable attention in the daily press. Yet the proportion of voters who foresee the involvement of the United States in another war within ten years is practically the same today as it was last August.

Slightly more than half believe we will be involved in a war within the next decade, while three out of four predict world-wide hostilities in 25 years.

Russia's accusations against America about war-mongering and Henry Wallace's statements to the same effect find little fertile ground in this country. An overwhelming majority of those who feel that war can't be avoided think that Russia, not the United States, will be responsible for starting it.

For more than two years the Institute has conducted tests of the voting public's expectations of war. Today's results are the latest in this series which forms a kind of fever chart of war fears. The temperature has risen very gradually but steadily.

From coast to coast a representative cross-section of voters was asked:

"Do you think the United States will find itself in another war within, say, the next 10 years?"

	Yes	No	No opin.
March, 1946	49%	38%	13%
April, 1947	50	38	12
August, 1947	53	36	11
Today	54	32	14

Respondents answering "yes" in the current survey were then asked:

"Who do you think will be responsible for starting the war?"

The answers:

Russia	70%
United States	7
England	2
Capitalists, politicians, etc.	6
Miscellaneous	7
No opinion	13
	105%*

(*Adds to more than 100 since some gave more than one answer.)

	Yes	No	No opin.
College	47%	47%	6%
High school	53	34	13
Grammar or no schooling	58	25	17

A separate but comparable cross-section of voters was asked: "Do you think the United States will find itself in another war within, say, the next 25 years?"

The results:

War in 25 Years?

	Yes	No	No opin.
March, 1945	38%	45%	17%
August, 1945	40	48	12
October, 1945	54	28	18
February, 1946	59	22	19
March, 1946	69	19	12
August, 1946	65	16	19
April, 1947	73	18	9
August, 1947	73	18	9
Today	76	15	9

Those saying "yes" to this question also feel that Russia will be responsible, by the same one-sided vote as in the other cross-section.

Voters in this country are more fearful of a world war than citizens of other foreign nations. A poll conducted by the International Association of Public Opinion (Gallup) Institutes last September reported sentiment in nine other nations, where the proportion of "yes" answers were lower than in the United States. The untries: Great Britain, Denmark, Canada, Netherlands, France, Australia, Sweden and Norway. Anxiety was more prevalent at that time in Italy.

U. S. Reimposing Tin Restrictions

The Government's wartime restrictions on the use of tin cans for beer, pet food, coffee, motor oil and other products will be reimposed tomorrow, it was announced yesterday.

The Commerce Department published the recontrol order in the expectation that President Truman by that time will sign a new bill extending for 90 days the department's wartime controls over tin, fertilizer, fats, oils and other scarce items.

Tin-can makers in general will be limited to the same amount of tin they used in 1947.

Pershing Drive Christian Church Members To Frame Mortgage Instead of Burning It

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Reversing the usual order, members of Pershing Drive Christian Church tomorrow at 5 p. m. will frame their canceled mortgage, instead of burning it.

The ceremonies will be a feature of the twenty-first anniversary of the congregation, worshiping at Pershing dr. and Highland st., Arlington.

Walter Graul, who participated in last year's drive that liquidated the remaining $4000 church debt, spearheaded the move for framing the mortgage. He got half-hearted opposition from a few members who admitted they were slaves to custom and liked "ceremonial flames."

"We have had that thing hanging over us for 20 years," Graul argued. "Why plod along for 20 years, then spend a whole year to get possession of a piece of paper and then burn it?"

Henry W. Link, chairman of the debt clearance drive; Walter Wingfield, church finance chairman, and the Rev. Berwyn Jones, pastor, agreed with Graul. So the church will burn a few birthday candles, instead.

The Pershing Drive congregation shares its building with the Arlington branch of All Souls' Unitarian Church, Washington, D. C. Mrs. Gilbert Phillips, wife of the Arlington Unitarian minister, will be at the organ console for the anniversary rites. William H. McMillan, choir director of Pershing Drive Church, will sing. E. E. Naylor, a church charter member, will deliver an historical sketch. The church was built in 1927.

Leap-Year Anniversary

Dr. Alfred Wesley Hurst—who on February 29, 1920, preached his first sermon to a congregation of 12 persons, tomorrow will mark his twenty-eighth anniversary in the ministry.

"I preached my first sermon at a little country church near Afton, Iowa," recalled the pastor of Cleveland Park Congregational Church, 34th and Lowell sts. nw., adding:

"The roads were drifted with snow so that they were almost impassable. There were 12 in the congregation including the 17-year-old preacher, and the sermon was 12 minutes in length. Someone remarked at the time that it would be 28 years before a fifth Sunday would occur again in February. Since that time I have served pastorates in Indiana, Missouri, North Carolina, and Tennessee, coming here June 1, 1944."

Clergy to Aid Red Cross Drive

Annual Red Cross Sabbath and Sunday will be observed here today and tomorrow.

Support of the annual Red Cross drive will be urged at today's services in synagogues and temples, and at Catholic and Protestant services tomorrow. The campaign opens Monday, with a goal of $1,080,000 for the area that includes Arlington, Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Alexandria, and the District of Columbia.

Ceremony Set For Closing of Service Center

The Lutheran Service Center at 736 Jackson pl. nw., attended by 200,000 service men and war workers in four years, will close its doors at ceremonies tomorrow at 4 p. m.

Owned by the National Lutheran Council, it will become a Lutheran office building, housing the council's welfare and public relations divisions and the Bureau of Service to Military Personnel, the Missouri Synod's Armed Services Commission, the United Lutheran Church's Board of Education, and the Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society.

Speakers at tomorrow's services will include the Rev. H. Conrad Hoyer, executive secretary of the division of American Missions of the National Lutheran Council, and Dr. O. A. Sauer, secretary of the Missouri Synod's Armed Services Commission.

Chaplain (major) John R. Strevig and Chaplain (colonel) Irving W. Stultz will bring greetings from the Army and Navy chiefs of chaplains. A color film of the center's dedication in 1944 will be shown.

Woman Quits U. S. Embassy For Russia

Moscow, Feb. 27 (AP).—An American woman resigned her job in the United States Embassy today. She said her work in the embassy was "incompatible with my present views."

Miss Annabelle Bucar, 33, of Clairton, Pa., told Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith she intends to stay in the Soviet Union. She was employed in the United States information service section.

Reactionary individuals, Miss Bucar wrote, are "doing their utmost to create dissension and misunderstanding between the American and Soviet peoples." The Russian people, she continued, are attempting to make the world a better place in which to live.

Miss Bucar said she found "many Americans are not sufficiently acquainted with the life of the Soviet people." She said she had acquired a real understanding of Russia and the Russians.

(In Clairton a sister, Mrs. Mary Louise Coyne, said Miss Bucar had telephoned her family Thursday that she was married to a Russian. The Russians do not allow their citizens to leave the country even though they marry foreigners.

[Miss Bucar's father, Ivan, a farmer and small coal operator, said "she wanted to go and see the world." Miss Bucar was born in Trafford, Pa. Her parents were born in what is now Yugoslavia.

[State Department officials in Washington said they had no idea Miss Bucar was unhappy. Embassy reports have described her as an efficient worker.

[Her action matched that of her former chief in Moscow, Armond D. Willis of Evanston, Ill., who walked out last April after criticizing Ambassador Smith. Willis said United States Embassy officials in Russia were "Russian haters."]

Two Newsmen Guard Sources And Go to Jail

Newburgh, N. Y., Feb. 27 (AP).—Two newspapermen on the Newburgh News were jailed today for contempt of court in declining to reveal confidential sources of information.

Douglas V. Clarke, 33, news editor, and Charles L. Leonard, 27, reporter, were sentenced to 10 days in jail. They refused to tell an Orange County Grand Jury where they obtained "numbers" lottery tickets reproduced in the paper.

In a joint statement the newsmen said "the code of ethics of the newspaper profession, without any statutory authority, stipulates without compromise, that violation of a confidence is the gravest ethical omission of which a newspaperman can stand accused.

"We feel that we are bound to comply with this principle and to make any sacrifice to perpetuate the lofty ideals of the newspaper profession."

Supreme Court Justice J. Gordon Flannery also fined each man $100.

Justice Flannery said he regretted having to pass sentence, but had no choice under the law.

Dr. Banks to Open 'Healing Mission'

Dr. John Gayner Banks of San Diego, Calif., will open a "healing mission" tomorrow at 8 p. m. at St. Agnes Episcopal Church, 46 Q st. nw. He edits the Episcopal publication, Sharing, and is warden of the Fellowship of St. Luke for Healing. He will also preach tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Banks

There will be mission services Monday through Thursday at 10 a. m. and 8 p. m., and communion at 7 a. m. daily, with an additional communion service Thursday at 9:30 a. m.

Donaldson to Speak

Airport to Fly 2,000,000 In New Projects Program

Officials expect two million passengers and five million visitors at the Washington National Airport in the year starting July 1.

The steady boom in airport crowds, it was disclosed yesterday, is prompting three major moves:

1. A $1,835,000 extension of the airport terminal building is planned. It would extend the present building 100 feet to the south, and provide added facilities for the airlines and passengers and the airport management. The House Appropriations Committee yesterday included the money in the Commerce appropriation bill which was sent to the House floor.

2. The Appropriations group cited increased use of the field by the Army during instrument-flying weather, and called for the Civil Aeronautics Administration and the Army to discuss routing Army pilots to Andrews Field to relieve the National Airport.

3. Washington Airport Administrator B. H. Griffin told the House Appropriations Subcommittee headed by Representative Karl Stefan (R., Neb.) that a new airport should be set up five or ten miles west of Washington to handle cargo and unscheduled operations.

It was Griffin who predicted the big rush of business in the next fiscal year. He testified that the airport has an estimated 4500 passengers a day, 15,000 visitors, and 600 planes, plus about 7500 persons employed on the reservation. There were 1,239,958 passengers in the 1947 fiscal year.

Besides the building money, the Airport's budget for operating expenses, $1,185,000, was approved in full by the House Appropriations Committee.

Social Arbiter Decides Dunking Is Decorous

New York, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Doughnut dunkers dunked conscience-free today. The queen of etiquette, Emily Post, wrote, "I feel it is all right if the whole doughnut isn't dunked.' She told the National Dunking Association just how to dunk a doughnut.

"The doughnut should be broken in half and neatly dipped into coffee or some other beverage," she said.

27 U. S. Warships Gather at Gibraltar

Gibraltar, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Twenty seven United States warships began a rendezvous here today incident to a change-over in the Mediterranean Fleet. The movement is to be completed by Tuesday.

Ships now in the Mediterrean are being relieved by the carrier Philippine Sea and other ships. The relief forces are to remain here until March 8, then sail for Mediterranean ports.

Fete Is Planned For Archbishop

A reception honoring the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of the Washington Archdiosese, will be held from 4 to 5:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Dunbarton College of the Holy Cross.

Hostesses will be representatives of the faculty, alumnae and student body, assisted by members of the board of advisers and the Parents' Guild of the college.

Poles Sponsor Mass

The Polish Club of Washington will sponsor a mass tomorrow at 11 a. m. in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University.

85 Girls 'Jail' 200 Bachelors In Leap Year Rule of Aurora

Aurora, Ill., Feb. 27 (AP).—Aurora's "powder puff" administration conduced a one-day reign of terror today—as far as the city's bachelors were concerned.

Eighty-six determined girls, 18 and up, took over this city of 50,000 in observance of Leap Year Day and ran it the way they think a city should be run.

Their first official act was to throw out a dragnet for the city's bachelors. Operating a new paddy wagon borrowed from Chicago—Aurora doesn't have one—they soon had the jail bulging with 200 bachelors.

The crime—bachelorhood. The punishment—fines consisting of silk stockings, candy and other dainties.

By midmorning there was only one especially eligible bachelor loose in the city—an escaped fugitive. He was Police Magistrate Bob Robinson. Robinson was locked up "so he can see what his own jail looks like, but he knew the tricks of the trade too well. He ducked to safety when the ladies opened his cell door to put in another prisoner. A warrant was put out for his rearrest.

In an effort to escape a fine, Wilbur E. Esser, a bank cashier, proposed in court to Police Magistrate Irene Youngen, and offered her a big diamond ring. She turned him down and fined him a $6 petticoat.

A special police detail was posted at all railroad stations to make sure no bachelors tried to skip town. Many unmarried men holed up for the day in locked hotel rooms.

Only one bachelor was safe from the female police force. They selected him to serve as "police matron."

5000 See Johnson and Pantos Star

Central's Vikings whipped Eastern's Ramblers, 52-43, last night at the Armory in the first game of the semifinal round doubleheader of the Interhigh play-offs.

Before a record crowd of nearly 5000 the Vikings won the right to meet the winner of the second game between Roosevelt and Wilson for the title, tonight.

Ross Keith put in the first basket for Central after 10 seconds, and the Vikings stayed ahead the rest of the way.

Bobby Johnson and Jimmy Pantos strayed a stady stream of field goals through the nets to give the Vikings leads of 14-8, 27-19, and 38-25, at the quarter marks.

The Ramblers used a pressing, closechecking man-for-man defense throughout in an effort to choke off the shooting of Johnson and Pantos. But Bobby scored 16 and Pantos 14.

Johnny Brown was Eastern's pacemaker with 15 points.

The first half of the Wilson-Roosevelt game was hotly contested. Before the teams walked off the court at intermission with Wilson ahead, 25-23, the lead had changed hands three time, and had been tied three times.

At the end of the first quarter, the score was deadlocked at 12-all. A foul goal at the beginning of the second quarter put Wilson ahead, 13-12, and the Green Tigers never fell behind again before half-time.

Lawson Little Cuts Hogan's Open Lead

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP). Ben Hogan continued to lead the St. Petersburg Open Golf Tournament tonight but his margin was trimmed to two strokes.

The Hershey, Pa., pro had an even par round of 37, 35—72 for the 6436-yard Lakewood Country Club course today. That, with his record-setting 63 yesterday, gave him 135 at the tourney halfway mark.

Former National Open Champion Lawson Little of Cleveland climbed up to second place, two strokes back of Hogan. Little fired a three-under-par 34,35—69 today to go with his yesterday's 68 for 137.

Three players, Jim Milward of Three Lakes, Wis., Pete Cooper of Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., and Norman Von Nida of Sydney, Australia, were tied for third place with 139.

Today's best rounds were turned in by Jimmie Demaret of Ojai, Calif., and Dick Metz of Arkansas City, Kans. Each had a 67 and the two were bracketed at 140 with Ed Furgol of Pontiac, Mich., Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., and Skip Alexander of Suothern Pines, N. C.

Quantico, Herndon Win

Quantico Marine Post High and Herndon High scored victories in the northern Virginia Class "C" Conference's District G championship playoffs at Fairfax High last night.

The first-seeded Little Marines polished off Leesburg, 67-12, with Bill Austin hitting for 22 points and Frank Watson adding 16. Herndon scored an expected 37-26 triumph over Nokesville and gained the right to meet Quantico in the finals tonight at 8:30 on the Fairfax floor.

Girls' play in the tourney saw Betty Slack dunk a last-minute goal to nose out Marshall, 19-17. Leesburg edged out Aldie, in another girls' game, 12-11, on a foul shot by Mary Donaldson.

Frustrated Player Buys Own Team

ALBERT BRICK couldn't quite make the grade as a professional ballplayer. So he became a top-notch lawyer and bought his own club.

Brick

Brick, a graduate of the Georgetown U. law school and a prominent Washington lawyer for the past 15 years, yesterday announced his purchase of a controlling interest in the Providence (R. I.) Chiefs of the Class B. New England League.

The 38-year-old former Providence resident also announced that his manager will be Don O. Burke, the fellow who coached him as a first baseman at Providence Classical High School.

"Don and I both have always wanted to be associated with pro ball," Brick smiled over his desk at his office at 1010 Vermont ave. nw. "In fact we both dream of hitting the big time.

"Who knows? Maybe if we make a success of this Class B team, we may make the big show yet."

Isbell Says Layne Rejected Three-Year Pact at $77,000

Baltimore, Feb. 27 (AP).—The Baltimore Colts of the All-America Conference conceded today they had been unable to sign Quarterback Bobby Layne of Texas, even for "more money than any football player ever has been offered."

Coach Cecil Isbell of the Colts reported the failure to outbid the Chicago Bears of the rival National Football League, for services of the Texas passing whiz.

Isbell said the Colts had offered Layne $10,000 bonus for signing, $20,000 for the first year, $22,000 for the second, and $25,000 for the third season.

"I never dreamed a football player would ever be worth that much," reported the disappointed Isbell. The Baltimore coach expressed the belief Layne already had been signed by the Bears who also have Quarterbacks Johnny Lujack of Notre Dame and Sid Luckman.

"Layne told me that if Chicago didn't match our offer penny for penny he would sign with us," Isbell said.

"The National Football League therefore is paying more money than I imagined."

Isbell said he knew "Lujack didn't get near the sum of money" the Colts offered Layne.

Isbell said his failure to sign the Colts' No. 1 draft choice was an all-around loss. "The league wanted him, I wanted him, and I know Baltimore wanted him."

Layne reportedly was holding off signing a pro football contract until after the baseball season. A pitcher, he is unbeaten in 24 Southwest Conference games.

His passing last season carried the Texas Longhorns into the Sugar Bowl where they walloped Alabama, 27-7. Layne completed 10 passes for 183 yards in the post-season tilt.

Halas to Confer With Layne Today

Phoenix(Ariz., Feb. 27 (AP).—George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears, said here today that Bobby Layne, has a Bear contract in his possession, but has not signed it.

Halas said he met Layne at El Paso Sunday and gave him the contract. Halas said he expects to call Layne sometime tonight or tomorrow morning.

He would not discuss terms of the contract, but said he believed the money involved was not as great as the Baltimore offer.

Newhouser's Pay Slashed

Detroit, Feb. 27 (AP).—Pitcher Hal Newhouser signed his 1948 Detroit Tigers contract this afternoon for a salary estimated around $50,000.

The star lefthander was understood to have taken a sizable cut from the $60,000 he received last year when he won 17 and lost 17 for the club. His disappointing .500 percentage in 1947 came despite an earned run average of only 2.87.

Newhouser, voted the American League's most valuable player in 1944 and 1945, won 80 games against only 27 defeats in the three seasons preceding 1947.

Wheelchair Vets Rout C. U., 65-13

The Birmingham Veterans Hospital wheelchair basketball team routed a team of Catholic University students, 65-13, before a crowd of 200 fans last night at C. U. It was the Vets' 18th victory in 21 games this season and their highest score date.

Chicago Player Now Reported in Hockey Gambling

Detroit, Feb. 27 (AP).—A third National Hockey League player, the Detroit Times said today, is involved in reported gabling activities. There was no official confirmation.

The Times said it had "learned that the hockey betting scandal had reached out to include a member of the Chicago Black Hawks."

In Chicago, Black Hawk President William J. Tobin said he had every confidence in his players. He declined further comment pending completion of an investigation now under way.

Detroit Police Commissioner Harry S. Toy, heading a State-wide investigation of murders, gambling and other crimes, said he had heard "noting about it" until he read the report in the Times.

The Times said the unnamed Black Hawk player was "directly linked" with James (Occo) Tamer, bank robber parolee whose activities touched off the widespread inquiry.

Rockville Girls Win

Richard Montgomery High of Rockville girls basketball team defeated the Gaithersburg girls, 36-23, yesterday.

Across the Nation

Scribes Pick Pie Traynor And Pennock

New York, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Herb Pennock, former New York Yankee pitching star, who died last month, and Harold (Pie) Traynor, the Pittsburgh Pirates' all-time third baseman, today were enshrined in baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N. Y.

Pennock received 84 out of a possible 121 votes from members of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Traynor received 93 ballots.

Pennock won 240 games and lost 161 with the Athletics, Boston Red Sox and Yankees. He appeared in 10 World Series games, winning five and losing none.

Traynor played his 17-year career with Pittsburgh. He compiled a .320 lifetime batting average and hit .293 in the 1925 and 1927 World Series. He broke in with the Pirates in 1920 and was named manager in 1935. He managed the club from the bench from 1936 to 1939.

Marty Marion Signs

St. Louis, Feb. 27 (AP).—Bob Hannegan can fly to spring training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., tonight knowing that he has one more important St. Louis Cardinal player in the contract fold. Shortstop Marty Marion is signed.

Stan Musial and Harry Brecheen are still conducting contract negotiations. The others are Catcher Del Rice, Outfielder Harold Rice and Pitcher Ray Yochim.

Paper Attacks Coach

Syracuse, N. Y., Reb. 27 (AP).—The Syracusian, monthly Syracuse University publication, called today in an edotorial for a "younger, fiery and expereinced" basketball coach.

The editorial, written by former Student Ed Norton of Larchmont, N. Y., blamed 33-year-old Head Coach Lewis P. Andreas for losing "objective games."

Until this season, Andreas-coached teams won a total of 308 games against 104 losses. The team so far this season has won 10 and lost 11 contests.

Race Wires Cut

San Francisco, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Telephone and telegraph service was cut off today to the penthouse offices of the Pioneer News Service.

Terps Send 16 To Track Meet

Maryland, winner of its invitational track me t last week, sent a 16-man squad to Chapel Hill for today's sixth annual Southern Conference indoor games.

After outpointing Navy, Duke, North Carolina and VMI, among others, the Terrapins are expected to make another creditable showing.

In the 440-yard run, Ed Matthews will defend the title he's won three times running. Bob Palmer, freshman sensation, who holds the Southern Conference cross-country record, represents the Terps in the distance events.

Mario Silvanelli and Karl Rubach, last week winners in the high and low hurdles, will participate in their specialties. In the field events, Terp performers include little Ed Crandall, a high jumper. Last week the 5-foot-7 Maryland boy leaped 5 feet 11 inches.

Fast Track Predicted In $100,000 Race Today

Arcadia, Calif., Feb. 27 (AP).—Headed by the favored Talon from the Argentine, 14 candidates were named today to race in Santa Anita's famed $100,000 handicap tomorrow.

Final entries for the eleventh running of this winter fixture thus completed a picture that promises another grandiose production of the turf—a topnotch field ready to go, clear weather, a fast track and an anticipated 80,000 crowd.

In post position order for the mile and one quarter, Gallop, the draw, came out like this:

1. Terry Bargello. 2. Talon. 3. On Trust. 4. Autocrat. 5. Miss Doreen. 6. Double Jay. 7. Endeavor II. 8. Elpis. 9. Shannon II. 10. Class Day. 11. Amble In. 12. Bridal Flower. 13. Brabancon. 14. Flashco.

Brabancon Surprise Candidate

The only surprise candidate was the speed horse, Brabancon, owned by Louis Bronstein of Los Angeles. The main absentee, victim of a shoeing mishap, was the 1947 winner, Olhaverry, the 9-year-old white horse from Chile.

Talon, conqueror of virtually this same field at a mile and one eighth two weeks ago, was the heavy choice in the event won in past years by such horse racing greats as Seabiscuit, Stagehand, Rosemont and Kayak II.

Owned by R. N. Ryan of New York and ridden by Eddie Arcaro, Talon faces a stern test, however, and the post position draw proved most interesting.

Flashco, Brabancon Far Outside

Two of the top speedsters, Frank Frankel's Flashco, who nosed out On Trust at the handicap distance in the $100,000 Santa Anita Maturity January 31, and Brabancon, start from the far outside, and Amble In, featherweighted at 109, goes from No. 11.

The 6-year-old Talon, however, moved from seventhteenth on the back stretch to win driving from Double Jay and On Trust in the battle February 14, while the pace setters burned up the track, and themselves.

Endeavor II, owned by Jorge de Atueha of Argentina and coupled with Talon in the betting, and Neil S. McCarthy's Shannon II, the Australian pride, have been disappointments in their initial American efforts here.

Starting from inside the pack, they must prove themselves the hard way. Endeavor packs 124 pounds to Talon's 122, and Shannon drew top weight of 126.

Other Greats Failed

With the notable exception of Seabiscuit, with 130 pounds in 1940, and Thumbs Up at the same weight in 1945, the "hundred grandeur" has been a nightmare for the heavy-loads as the great Discovery, Equipoise, Challendon and Armed can attest.

For jockey duels, there'll be Arcaro on Talon, Johnny Longden on On Trust, Jackie Westrope on Flashco and Ralph Neves on Autocrat, not to forget Warren Mehrtens, flown here to ride the King Ranch's classy mare, Bridal Flower.

Last year a record 85,500 saw the big 'cap. The betting handle for the race was a record $1,044,351.

If all start, the winner will collect $102,500 net, and the gross purse will be worth $137,500, neither of which marks an all-time high for the event.

Expect Romp For Citation In Flamingo

Miami, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—Citation and seven other horses were named today for the nineteenth running of the $50,000 added Flamingo Stake at Hialeah tomorrow.

That's the way the racing fans and experts look at it, and everything indicates that this colorful climactic race of the season at a track which fairly drips with color should be a one-horse affair with the other seven merely chasing Citation home.

For the records, the other seven are William Woodward's Hypnos, second to Citation in the Everglades Handicap here February 18; Saggy, the "speed" horse owned by Mrs. Stanley Sagner of Baltimore; Pennant Day, from the Short Brook Farm of Alfred Decozen and Parsippany, ... J.; Walter P. Chrysler's Silverling and Stephen Sanford's Realtor, both from New York; Big Dial, owned by Ernie Hart and George M. Jacobson of Washington, D. C., and Cheops, owned by Mrs. S. S. Zell of Baltimore.

A check by the track disclosed that all of the entries with the exception of Saggy have been named for the Kentucky derby.

In two seasons of racing, Citation has lost only one race, that to a stablemate, Bewitch. He was last season's top money winning two-year-old, earning $155,680.

Citation, with Al Snider up, may go to the post the shortest priced favorite in the history of the event. Brevity was 1 to 4 when he won the 1936 Flamingo and set the track record of 1:48 1-5th for the mile and one-eighth. Citation may break that record, too, for he ran the same distance in 1:49 without being pushed when he won the Everglades. If all eight start, the race will have a gross value of $63,100 and the winner's share will be $44,500.

IF YOU'RE READING this standing, place your feet firmly. If you're sitting, grab hold of an arm of the chair. If you're lying down, place your head high on the pillow.

Is the smelling salts handy? Do you remember your family physician's phone number? Is your insurance paid up? Who is your next of kin? Ready? All set? Here goes:

I know the "Walking Man!"

Don't crowd. Take your time. Get in line. I'm going to let you have it. I'm as excited as you are. I'm going nuts. But aren't we all? Let's call the wagon and get it over with.

If you think you're "Walking Man" batty, what about us sports department guys? We're getting so we square off like a punch-drunk fighter every time the phone rings. We're stumbling around the office muttering, "Master,master, bell, bell, metropolis, metropolis."

It's that Truth and Consequences monkey business engineered by Ralph (NBC) Edwards. His third offense, too, which should be enough to send him up for life. He pulled a 'Mr. Hush" (Jack Dempsey) and a "Miss Hush" (Martha Graham). Now he has a "Walking Man."

As far as we're concerned, Edwards should take a walk and take poison. Of course, it's all in the name of sweet charity. This time the contest is helping heart trouble—and in more ways than one, if you know what I mean.

It's the most expensive gag in history. A billion and more man, woman and child hours have gone into the game. If you don't believe it, ask the libraries. Men are staying home from work trying to figure it out. Women are piling dirty clothes in the corner and serving picnic lunches instead of dinner. Kids are skipping school.

All on account of this riddle:

"Bing, Bong, Bell, it's ten
And only one can tell;
"The master of the metropolis"
Fits his name quite well."

We could add a line, too, but this is a family newspaper.

Our beef? The Sports Department has been turned into the "Walking Man" Research Bureau. We have answered phone calls until we have the barmaid's elbow.

Started like the evening breeze that rustles through the cypress trees; but now they're "het" up, playing for keeps and piling sportswriters up in heaps. (That sentence proves we're going nuts.)

At first, President Truman, Louis B. Mayer, J. Edgar Hoover and others were hot. They were eliminated and then the sports figures started catching it. So far only two—Bing Crosby (horses) and Joe Louis (boxing) have been foul balls.

But Edwards is inserting sharply pointed clews now.

The best bet appears to be Mickey Walker—they even have this one hooked up with Johnny Walker and the cane on the Scotch label. Red Grange has come to the front rapidly—10 and 1 is a football team, etc.

The latest guess is Bill Stern, the sports commentator—the ship's bells, stern is a part of a boat, New York's mayor is Bill O'Dwyer, etc.

In fact, by working the imagination overtime it is possible to come up with almost any human being of the masculine sex. For instance, somebody said the reference to "one" in the riddle was a surefire clue on Christopher Columbus who was once 1-year-old. But Columbus isn't walking—he's dead.

Two weeks ago the chief clew sounded like two shots. A drunk heard them and yelled, "That cinches it. Two shots means two shots of whiskey. So he has to be either I. W. Harper or Paul Jones."

The other day I found out the right answer.

A fellow phoned and said, "I'm the 'Walking Man.' My wife has been working on the contest for sometime and she just wrapped my ear around a telephone pole."

Caps Face Pace-Setting Bombers at St. Louis

McKinney Unable to Make Trip

The bruised and battered Caps limped out of town last night for one of their most important Basketball Association of America missions this season.

All they have to do is engage the first-place Bombers at St. Louis tonight and dash oc to Chicago to meet the second-place Stags Sunday afternoon.

It would be a big order any time. It's particularly big with Bones McKinney out. The lanky Carolinian, who has been conspicuously absent in the last two games the Caps have dropped, is still suffering from a severely sprained ankle and was unable to make the trip.

Adding to Coach Red Auebach's woes are John Mahnken's strained back and Irv Torgoff's injured hand.

Only Capt. Bob Feerick contributed anything resembling spectacular basketball as the Caps lost to the Stags, 73-66, and were overwhelmed by Baltimore Thursday night, 97-70.

Feerick, dropping 20 field goals in the two contests, amassed a total of 53 points. But, with no teammate approaching Feerick's pace, his outstanding performance couldn't keep the Caps on top of the Western Division.

On Thursday Philadelphia's Warriors lent a helping hand when they bumped the Stags, but St. Louis won a thrilling two-overtime-period contest from Boston and the Bombers now lead by 1½ games.

Washington goes westward in third place, a half game behind Chicago. With only nine games left, two defeats might kill any championship hopes the Caps are entertaining.

Little noted this week was the temporary dethroning of Joe Fulks as the scoring leader of the Basketball Association of America.

Chicago's Max Zaslofsky, on the strength of 20 points here and 14 in Philadelphia, sent his season's total to 762—14 more than Fulks has.

Frankie Wilson Ties for Lead In Women's Bowling With 424

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Frances (Frankie) Wilson rolled the highest scratch set of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club benefit bowling tournament and gained a tie for the women's lead in the week-long competition.

Bowling in the Ladies District League at College Park, Miss Wilson's 406 with an 18 handicap gave her a handicap score of 424 to enable her to move into a first-place deadlock with Virginia Siegel, who achieved her 424 Thursday at Hi Skor.

High men's score of the third night of tournament play was rolled by HarryGrossman, in Citizen's League play at King Pin; and Larry Fulp in the Connecticut ave. Business Men's League at Grossman had a 393 together with a 75 handicap for a 468 and a tie for fourth place with Fulp, who scored 423-45—468. Fulp's scratch score of 423 was fifth highest rolled to date.

Jack Miller held an to the men's lead with his 419-27—506 score, and El Geib kept the high scratch set lead with his 442. High game of the tournament was John Stewart's 175 effort made at Petworth Wednesday night.

One more entire league entered the tournament yesterday; the Brookland Merchants had a 100 per cent entry, the only one of the evening to achieve a full turnout.

The taurnament continues through Monday, March 1, at every area bowling alley. Entry fee is only 50 cents and hundreds of prizes will be awarded. The affair is open to all league bowlers.

Teacher Pay Improvement Recommended

A special committee studying personnel policies in Arlington schools yesterday recommended that the County School Board provide up to $192,000 more annually for teachers' pay and other benefits.

The committee was one of 14 survey groups studying different school problems at the board's request.

At the same time yesterday, another committee on entrance and abolition this summer of Arlington's "trimester" promotion plan under which pupils may enter school at three different periods during the school year. The committee suggested that children be admitted to school in September if they become 6 years old before the January 1 following admission.

Eight of the 11 committees reporting their findings thus far have recommended the School Board spend a total of $341,700 more annually on County education facilities.

Specifically, the personnel policies committee asked that credit for outside experience be increased to a maximum of from four to eight years; that the differential for a maximum degree be raised from $200 to $300.

The group also asked that a cost-of-living bonus of from $100 to $200 be granted; requested an allowance for dependents, and recommended improvement of sick-leave provisions.

A committee on mental hygiene advised that in-service training be provided for teachers to equip them to recognize maladjusted children. Such training might be received from the proposed county mental hygien clinic, due to be in operation April 1, the committee pointed out.

A building maintenance committee suggested the school system set up its own planning agency to organize maintenance and inspection work, and advised establishment of a central repair and maintenance shop.

Auto Workers Ask Freedom In Politics

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The CIO United Auto Workers yesterday asked a Federal Court to throw out, as unconstitutional, the Taft-Hartley Act's ban on union political activities.

The union's complaint also asked that Attorney General Tom C. Clark be enjoined from enforcing the prohibition in the law because of its censorship on free speech, press, assembly and petition.

The suit was filed in District Court here in behalf of Walter R. Reuther, president, and Emil Mazey, secretary of the UAW.

In an acompanying statement, Reuther said the suit will provide an opportunity for a Supreme Court decision on the constitutionality of the disputed section before the court adjourns its present term, and in time for the 1948 national elections.

The case will be heard before the three-judge court. However it rules, an appeal can be taken directly to the Supreme Court. That appeal has precedence in being heard.

Reuther apparently believes that in this way he will have a quicker final decision, and one with greater breath, than the ruling which will result from the case in which CIO President Philip Murray is involved.

Murray was indicted on February 11 for violating the political activity section of the law by indorsing a congressional candidate in a CIO publication. His case has yet to be heard. He has petitioned to have it dismissed on grounds that the section is unconstitutional.

If corners were cut and all the circumstances were favorable, it would be possible for either of the two suits to be decided by the Supreme Court before it adjourns this summer. The odds, however, appeared to be against it. The Reuther case seemed to have the better chance.

Reuther's suit seeks a "declaratory judgment" from the court to the effect that the section is unconstitutional. The provision in the law prevents any labor organization, bank or corporation from making any expenditure in connection wtih an election.

The union complaint called this "class legislation of the worst kind . . . discriminatory and repugnant to the basic ideas" of the Constitution.

The complaint described how the UAW and its local unions proposed to participate in the 1948 elections—through discussion and dissemination of candidates' voting records and other information on political issues through meetings, radio broadcasts, paid advertisements, handbills, pamphlets, etc.

The law, the complaint alleged, would stop the union from such acts. Unless the Attorney General was enjoined for trying to enforce it, the document continued, the union would be forced to defend many criminal prosecutions and to spend large sums in those suits.

"The cost thereof will be ruinous and the damage to UAW and its local unions will be irreparable," the complaint said.

It argued that the section of the law prohibiting political activity by unions was an unlawful attempt to "immunize" the whole Taft-Hartley Act against repeal by a subsequent Congress. The contention was the prohibition would stop union members from electing to Congress members who would repeal the law.

House Defeats Plan to Extend Social Security

By the United Press

The House yesterday approved a resolution directing the Treasury to withhold an order which would extend social security coverage to thousands of workers not now covered.

Republicans argued that the order would redefine "employe" so as to cover salesmen, newspaper and magazine vendors, and others engaged in "normally independent operations." Representative Bertrand W. Gearhart (R., Calif.), sponsor of the bill, said Congress did not intend to cover "Fuller brush people" in the Social Security Act.

Opponents of the resolution, mainly Democrats, contended that Congress did intend to cover those now challenged by the Republicans. They said the Treasury order was prepared in accordance with Supreme Court decisions.

Hoffman Calls 16 to Hearing On GSI Strike

Secret Session's Aim Is to Find If Government Tries To Bypass Law

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.) yesterday ordered 16 witnesses, including high Government officials, to appear this morning at a secret Congressional hearing on the GSI strike.

He wants to find out, he said, if the Administration is trying to bypass the Taft-Hartley Act in its efforts to settle the 54-day-old strike against 42 cafeterias operated by GSI for the Government. Also, he would like to know if the Administration is exerting "pressure" on GSI to force it to bargain with the union, Local 471 of the CIO Cafeteria Workers.

Among those subpenaed were Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman, Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming and Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, GSI president.

A subpena also was prepared for John W. Gibson, Assistant Secretary of Labor, but was withdrawn yesterday morning. F. Albert Reiman, committee staff member said this was done when it was learned that Gibson had earlier expressed willingness to appear on request.

Hoffman's three-man committee, a subcommittee of the House Education and Labor Committee, drew immediate fire from two Congressmen.

Representative Adam Clayton Powell, jr., (D., N. Y.) said he was "shocked that any member of Congress would try to keep any labor dispute from being peacefully settled . . . If the Administration is trying to settle the strike, it should be praised, not criticized."

Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) joined in condemning the hearing as "obstructing" settlement of the dispute.

Attorney George E. Strong, who also was subpenaed, has been trying to conciliate the strike of more than 1000 workers since he was appointed to the job by Fleming February 16. The union struck January 5 when GSI refused to negotiate.

Others scheduled to appear at the executive hearing, which opens at 10 a. m. in Room 429 Old House Office Building, are Oliver T. Palmer, business agent for the union, and officials of GSI.

PAY PROGRESS: The American Federation of Labor yesterday hauled out its big gun in a move to win pay raises for Federal workers.

William Green, AFL president, told the House Civil Service Committee that salaries of Federal workers should be raised at least $800 annually, and that even greater increases should be given those in more responsible work. In addition, the labor leader proposed an increase of 40 cents an hour for daily and hourly employes.

Green warned the committee that the AFL will oppose any plan to force Federal agencies to absorb the cost of any pay raise by the firing of employes, downgradings, extension of hours, etc.

Another AFL witness was R. A. Rice, president of the Railway Mail Association. He urged the committee to write a separate bill which would give postal employes a minimum increase of $800.

An $800 increase also was indorsed by B. A. Winquest, president of the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association. Winquest explained that rural carriers had to buy their own cars and equipment and that the cost of these items had doubled in many instances. Hearings will be resumed Tuesday.

SECURITY: The authority of several agencies to fire employes summarily on security charges is to be modified. State, Navy, Army, Air Forces, Central Intelligence and Atomic Energy now have that broad power which will expire soon. Officials of these agencies yesterday urged the Senate Armed Forces Committee to extend this authority.

Arthur S. Flemming, GOP member of the Civil Service Commission, told the committee that the bill goes too far; that it gave too much peacetime authority to the several agency heads.

He suggested this compromise: that heads of the six agencies be given authority to "suspend" employes summarily on security grounds; that any suspended employe be given a detailed list of charges, and the right to reply and to be heard. Also, that any employe who is fired be given the right to appeal to the Civil Service Commission which could certify him to a non-sensitive job in another agency.

After Flemming spoke, all agency representatives at the hearing agreed with his suggestions. A subcommittee headed by Senator Baldwin (R., Conn.) ordered the bill rewritten to include the Flemming recommendations.

$1,600,000 Price Set For Nevius

A condemnation jury yesterday decided that the Federal Government should pay $1,600,000 for the 25-acre Nevius tract, nearly double what the Government wanted to pay for the land.

The jury came up with the figure after four days of testimony in Alexandria District Court.

The Government, which had offered to pay $850,000 for the tract on the Virginia side of the Memorial Bridge, argued the site was worth only $775,000. Witnesses for the owners of the tract testified that the land was worth as much as $5,600,000.

Asks Verdict Set Aside

Government Attorney Ralph Lutrell immediately asked the court to set aside the verdict and was granted 10 days to present his case.

The Nevius tract, located at Lee boulevard and Arlington Ridge rd, Arlington, was selected by Veterans' Administration two years ago as site for a proposed $15,000,000 veterans hospital. The owners, headed by Avon M. Nevius, retired Washington banker, refused to sell for the bid price. The land was taken by the Government through condemnation.

The county government opposed the sale on the ground the tract was an outstanding site for an apartment-hotel development Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) attacked the purchase asserting that less costly sites were available for the Veterans hopital. He persuaded the House Appropriations Committee to forbid use of the Nevius site by VA.

Efforts by VA to get rid of the tract were frustrated by legal complications. Meanwhile, the Arlington County government reversed its stand on the hospital using the site, fearing that the tract would be added to the Arling Cemetery. Representative Smith had agreed to go along with the county's attitude, but thus far the House Appropriations Committee has not lifted the ban.

VA, which spent around $100,000 on preliminary plans for the hospital on the Nevius tract, has been scouting around for a new tract, but still has some hope that Congress will yet permit fulfillment of the Nevius plan.

Board Eases Liability in Aid Fraud

A move to protect its employes in the event of overpayment of public assistance funds made in good faith was made yesterday by the Board of Public Welfare.

If fraud by the recipient of the assistance is indicated, the board will refer the matter to police or the United States Attorney's office.

Under existing law, the case worker, supervisor, head of public assistance, director of public welfare and District auditor all may be held personally liable for assistence payments that turn out to be unjustified.

The District auditor, A. B. Wilkerton, recently revealed some $165,000 in relief payments had been found to be unjustified. Because of the personal liability law, a $3644 check for the estate of the late Ray L. Huff, public welfare director, has bee nheld up.

The board's action yesterday is subject to approval of the Commissioners in so far as general public assistance is concerned. However, it makes its own regulations for assistance under Social Security acts, Raymond F. Clapp, acting director, explained.

Clapp said the move merely formalized an administrative order of the late director. Meanwhile, reports on the personal liability law and the misspent funds are expected to be made to the Commissioners shortly by the corporation counsel's office and the auditor.

Store Manager's Quick Thinking Saves Streamliner

Williamson, W. Va., Feb. 27 (AP).—The quick thinking of a coal company store manager averted another wreck for the "Powhatan Arrow" last night.

The Norfolk & Western streamliner, westbound to Cincinnati, was brought to a stop within 15 feet of an earth slide which blocked the tracks 5 miles east of here.

Mickey Jessie, 35, of Rawls, heard of the slide 15 minutes before the streamliner was due. He ran from his store three-quarters of a mile away and attracted the attention of the crew by wildly waving his arms.

The "Arrow" jumped the tracks near Portsmouth, Ohio, last week, killing the fireman and shaking up many passengers.

Daylight Time For D. C. Area Voted in Va.

Decision Remains With Communities In New Legislation

Richmond, Va., Feb. 27 (AP).—Daylight saving time, if wanted, was voted here today for Arlington and Fairfax Counties and the City of Alexandria.

After dissenting expressions by a half dozen Delegates, the House passed the Senate bill permitting summer time for those Virginia areas near Washington, D. C. Full support, however, was voiced by representatives of the affected areas.

The bill, which previously passed the Senate, now goes to Governor Tuck for his approval.

Sees Confusion Ahead

House Whip E. McCue of Albemarle, complained that passage of the bill would only bring confusion at the next legislative session "when half a dozen or so other counties will be asking for it."

Armistead Boothe of Alexandria, justified time change exception for the area "because thousands of our residents work in Washington, which has daylight saving time." He said he was willing to extend the privilege to Albemarle County if it wanted it.

H. H. Adams of Northampton objected to the bill, declaring people would have to write ahead to find out when courts and banks would be open.

Robert J. McCandlish of Fairfax argued for the bill, saying it was confusing for people to go to work by one time and live at home by another.

J. Maynard Magruder of Arlington asked passage of the bill because the area voters want it.

Called "Nuisaance"

Delegate Frank Moncure of Stafford assailed daylight saving time as "a nuisance in this world." If Arlington and Alexandria got it, he said, Fairfax would be wanting it, too. Told that the bill included Fairfax, he said:

"That settles it. Now I'm violently opposed."

The bill passed handily, but not without some rural Delegates vowing that no other county would likely get permission to depart from "God's Time."

The Assembly also:

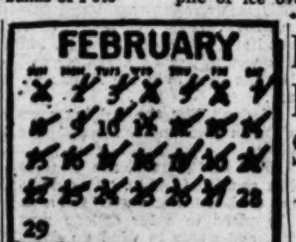
1. Concurred in the House of Delegates to minor amendments by the Senate to the Governor's tax bills to raise 14 million dollars additional annual revenues.

2. The Senate committee on fish and game voted four to two to defer until Tuesday action on Senator Charles W. Crowder's bill to prohibit seining for rockfish during the spawning season. Crowder said the deferment would, "in effect," kill the bill, designed as a conservation measure after reports of an unprecedented run of rockfish off Colonial Beach, Va.

3. The Senate advanced and put in line for passage tomorrow bills to tighten up the State's child labor laws. It similarly moved a bill giving cities of more than 3500 population $300 per mile for maintenance of streets in the States secondary roads system.

4. The House passed the McCue-Gordon bill amending the Charlottesville city charter with reference to the school board and taxes, and another bill authorizing counties and towns to make gifts of money or property to certain associations and institutions.

Tomorrow the Assembly will meet for its first Saturday session since the start of the present term.



Hitting it on the nose again, the Weatherman is now batting .852 for February

Loose Knob Foils Thief In Grocery

Ernest Perry Hill, 25, of 1607 7th st. nw., apparently experienced at larceny but not loose doorknobs, yesterday was given a year in jail and fined $200 or two years if he doesn't pay the fine.

Hill was left holding the bag, of $49.49, Wednesday night when he grabbed it in the grocery store of Peter Nokimos, 37, at Plaza Market, 41 Massachusetts ave. nw., bolted for the door, and yanked off the doorknob in his haste, effectively blocking his own escape. Nokimos, meanwhile, fired twice, but missed both shots.

Judge George D. Neilson, in Municipal Court, pronounced sentence after Defense Attorney Andrew M. Thomas argued that Hill was merely making a purchase and had knocked some cans of tuna fish and the bag of money off a shelf.

Police testified the defendant had no money when arrested so he could not have made a purchase.

Hill's police records, produced yesterday, showed sevent previous convictions for larceny in North Carolina, plus six more in the District.

Liquor License In Another's Name Illegal, ABC Rules

It's illegal for a person to obtain a liquor license in his own name for a person who leases his restaurant, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board ruled yesterday.

The board revoked the license of De John Papanicolas for a restaurant at 2603 Connecticut ave. nw., effective March 23 at 8 a. m.

It ruled that Papanicolas wasn't operating the restaurant, which he leased to Little Mexico, Inc., and therefore wasn't the actual owner of the business, as required by ABC regulations.

Charges were brought against Papanicolas February 19. Hearing testimony revealed he was granted the license on February 2, six days after he completed arrangements for the lease to Little Mexico, Inc., ABC officials said.

Poor Training For GIs Laid to School Board

Apprentice Council Charges Approval of Substandard Plants

The D. C. Apprenticeship Council yesterday accused the Board of Education of "bypassing" it and approving substandard establishments for "on the job" training under the GI Bill of Rights.

In its annual report to the Commissioners, the council charged the School Board's action allows training that borders on "exploitation" of veterans.

Milton R. Stenvents, council chairman, said the board had approved for "on the job training" approximately 100 etablishments that previously had been turned down by the council as unsuitable for apprenticeship training.

These concerns, he added, are in trades that clearly require a minimum of four years' apprenticeship training instead of the two-year "on the job" period. In most cases, he said, they use "trainees" for "heavy" labor and fail to teach them blueprint reading and other essential technical knowledge.

Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning, who certified "on the job" training establishments to the school board, said the preesnt policy would be continued pending a legal opinion by the corporation counsel, requested last September.

Corporation Counsel Vernon West said the matter had been referred to Assistant Corporation Counsel L. F. Dante, who has been too busy with "other assignments" to prepare the opinion.

Brumbaugh Hits 'Mass Education' By Single Pattern

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Feb. 27 (AP).—Dr. A. J. Brumbaugh, vice president of the American Council on Education at Washington, today criticized what he called "mass education" and appealed for courses adjusted to individual capacities.

Dr. Ikenberry

Dr. Brumbaugh was the principal speaker at inauguration of Dr. Samuel Ikenberry as the 10th president of Shepherd College.

"Today, we have available tests of intelligence, aptitude and achievement . . . whereby we can identify and roughly measure the individual characteristics of our students," Dr. Brumbaugh said. "Yet we proceed on the old assumption that all students will fit into a single pattern.

"Without endeavoring to understand our students as individuals or to adjust their educational experience to their capacities, interests and needs, we treat them en masse and take pride in the fact that a significant percentage fail. In most instances, the failure is ours."

Dr. Ikenberry accepted the presidency before a gathering of educators from West Virginia, Maryland and Washington, D. C.

Debates End Campaign in Referendum

Two public debates tonight and a radio discussion tomorrow will wind up campaigns for Alexandria's Tuesday referendum on the method of electing city councilmen.

Charles Davison, ward advocate will debate the issue with Albert A. Smoot at 8 tonight at George Mason School auditorium, 2601 Cameron Mills rd.

Davison has filed as a candidate for the April 6 primary from the Second Ward. Smoot has announced he will run if the at-large plan wins. State Delegate Armistead L. Boothe, who introduced the referendum bill in the General Assembly, will moderate.

A similar debate will be held at the USO center, 1000 Pendleton st., at 8:15 p. m. Bernard Fagelson and Thomas Moncure will defend the ward method of election. David D. Squires, also a conditional candidate, and Mrs. Malcom D. Lamborne, jr., will argue for the at-large plan.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a half hour discussion of the issue at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow over Station WPIK. Fagelson and George K. Bender will speak for the ward plan; Smoot and Irvin M. Hufford for the at-large plan. Boothe will explain the provisions of his bill.

The Alexandria Electoral Board yesterday announced that regular voting places in the six wards will be open from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. Tuesday.

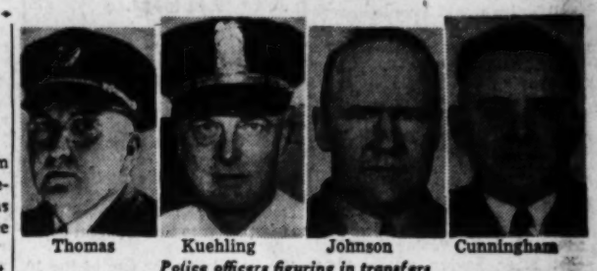
Police Capt. Cunningham Moved From Traffic in One of Several Shifts

Loraine Johnson Of 5th Precinct Takes His Place, Effective Monday



Thomas Kuehling Johnson Cunningham

Police officers figuring in transfers

Transfer of Police Capt. William J. Cunningham from the traffic department to the Tenth Precinct was announced yesterday by Police Chief Robert J. Barrett.

His transfer, which brings Capt. Loraine T. Johnson into the traffic department from the Fifth Precinct, was among several police shifts announced.

The shifts are effective Monday, at which time Capt. Walter T. Storm will be sworn in as inspector. Monday also will see retirement examinations of Capt. Benjamin F. Kuehling and Inspector Walter H. Thomas, the department executive officer. Thomas has been ill several months.

Cunningham said he had high regard for the men with whom he worked in the traffic department and urged them to cooperate fully with his successor. But, he said, "the traffic situation in Washington has always been very difficult—and always a headache." He sad he felt the department has done a good job in keeping down the traffic toll and "perhaps can even do better."

Major Barrett said the transfer had been made at Cunningham's request.

The move leaves the 5th Precinct without a captain and Barrett has been waiting for a copy of eligibility lists from the Civil Service Commission. He favors, it is understood, placing of Lieut. Albert B. Clark, of the 13th Precinct, into the spot.

N. Y. Police Work on Robbery Motive in Haeberle Slaying

By Charles Yarbrough
Post Reporter

With only the description of one man, New York police combed the city yesterday for at least two suspects in the hotel room slaying of Harvey M. Haeberle, Navy film expert.

Haeberle, 35, of Falls Church, Va., was a film supervisor at the Navy's Photo Center, Anacostia.

His trussed body, tied with a version of a Chinese stangulation torture knot, was found in his Henry Hudson Hotel room in New York Wednesday afternoon. An autopsy showed he had been smothered to death after being tied.

New York authorities still pursued the robbery motive. Haeberle's wallet containing about $60, his watch and a fountain pen were missing from the thoroughly ransacked room.

Funeral services will be held in his home town, New Ulm, Minn., Monday. His wife, the former Mattie Locke Macomber of Des Moines, Iowa, and her brother, Sumner Macomber of Des Moines, were at the Haeberle home in Falls Church yesterday after conferring with New York authorities. The Haeberles have two children, Mac 4, aand Jay 1.

Police have established the fact that Haeberle knew his slayer. He answered a knock on his hotel room door with the greeting, "Hello, long time no see." Only description the police have is of this caller, but they said it would have taken more than one man to subdue the well-built Haeberle. He had been dead about 10 hours when his body, clad only in shorts, was found by a hotel maid.

Haeberle, former Naval lieutenant, had gone to New York on a Navy mission to confer with film producers on a new recruiting film.

Golf Clubs As Well

Thieves Get Food, Smokes And Whisky

Liquors, smokes, and shrimps, cooked and raw, attracted thieves here Thursday night, their owners reported to police yesterday.

Some $858 worth of whisky of varying quality and price range were removed after hours from Barr's Columbia Grill, 2517 Pennsylvania ave. nw., Owner Irving L. Okum told police. The thieves broke a rear door glass, he said.

Cigarettes valued at $239 were stolen from a Safeway store at 1779 Columbia rd. nw., Manager Edgar H. Patterson reported. Here, too, entrance was affected by breaking a glass pane in the rear door.

Valued At $63.75

Three gallons of cooked shrimp and 45 pounds of uncooked vanished during the night at Martin's Fish Stand, 3216 14th st. nw., reported Blanche M. Beavers, of 1349 Kenyon st. nw. The seafood was valued at $63.75.

Col. James L. Hathaway, residing in Bachelor Officers' Quarters, at Fort McNair, reported the loss of his $75 set of golf clubs and bag. They were removed from his unlocked car, parked by a service station at 1128 3d st. ne., he said.

Abraham Greenblatt, operator of the Spic and Span grocery store, at 5138 Grant st. ne., told police some one broke into his store and departed with $13.08 worth of cigarettes and candy.

Charge Robbery Attempt

Police yesterday charged three sailors with attempted robbery last Sunday on Jomes H. Robinson, hacker, of 1021 New Jersey ave. nw. They were identified as Samuel T. Henley, jr., 18; Roy E. Boring, 22, and Charles E. Stephenson, 23, all attached to the Naval Gun Factory.

They reported no arrests, however, were made in the armed holdup and robbery of $682 in checks and cash, at 6 p. m. Wednesday, from an American Airlines branch office, at 813 15th st. nw. Miss Grace O'Hara, of 1417 N st. nw., reservation clerk, said the bandit sported two plaster patches under his left eye.

Barney House Singers To Give Church Concert

Twenty teenage singers of Barney Neighborhood House will give a concert at 8 p. m. Sunday at the Gorsuch Methodist Church, 4th and L sts. sw.

Mrs. Ida Naney, director of the music school at the house, 470 N st. sw., said yesterday the program will include selections from "The Lord's Prayer," "Trees" and "The Chocolate Solider," and a group of spirituals. Solos will be song by Donald James and Shirley Britt, Virginia Curtis, Mary Cordivillia and Dorothy Briault.

Barber Shop Quartet Program for Hospital

A program of "oldtime harmony" will be presented by the District Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow in Lisner Auditorium, 21st and H sts. nw.

The performance is for the benefit of the George Washington University Hospital Campaign for $925,000.

D. C. Backers Of Wallace Free of Probe

Senate Told Police Not Planning Check On Red Activities

Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) yesterday read to the Senate Commissioner John Russell Young's denia lthat Washington police had plans to investigate local supporters of Henry A. Wallace for communistic activities.

Millikin told the Senate he had asked Commissioner Young by letter to answer six questions raised by a story in the Washington Daily News February 4, which reported that the Metropolitan Police were plannng to investigate Wallace backers.

The story, the letter to Young and Young's reply, which Millikin called "very gratifying," were read into the record.

Millikin started with the comment, "If we wish to preserve our civil liberties, we must be devoted to them in connection with causes of which we do not approve. I hope it is needless to say I have no sympathy with that (Wallace) campaign."

Death of Boy, Aunt Probed By Coroner

The Page County (Va.) coroner last night was investigating what he called the "mysterious" deaths in Alma, Va., of a 3-year-old boy and his 21-year-old aunt from Arlington—only five days apart.

Dr. George H. Long said he was awaiting the arrival of the family physician before performing autopsies.

The child, Roger Lee Bailey, and the aunt, Mrs. Bertie Louise Campbell, 1909 N. Stafford st., Arlington, died at the home of Mrs. Campbell's father-in-law, Tom Campbell.

Long said the boy died last Sunday evening after appearing ill for an hour or two.

Mrs. Cambell died about 10 a. m. yesterday, Dr. Long said, after a similar short illness. She merely complained of a headache Thursday night, he added.

Mrs. Cambell, identified as the wife of a Capital Transit bus driver, went to Alma, mear Luray, Va., to attend Roger's funeral, according to Long.

Dr. Long said last night that so far he has been "unable to tell the cause of either death." He said the police are not on the case. The family physician, he explained, had been summoned to treat Mrs. Campbell and was expected to arrive late last night or this morning.

The only other persons in the house at the time of the deaths, as far as Long knew, he said, were the grandfather and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Bailey. Dr. Long said the elder Campbell's first wife was dead and that he was separated from a second.

Mrs. Taft, Radio Guest

Mrs. Martha Taft, wife of GOP Presidential Candidate Robert A. Taft, will be guest on "Meet the Press" over station WOL tonight at 10 p. m. She will be interviewed by Phelps Adams of The New York Sun, Elizabeth Craig of Maine, Columnist Marquist Childs of The Washington Post, and Lawrence Spivak of the American Mercury.

Area News in Brief

'Found' Suit Still Fit Well at Court Finale

Harry Lee Ealley, 26, of 1109 4th st. sw., is a man who appreciates a good fit in a suit, and when he found one on February 2 that draped his shape to perfection, he kept it on.

In fact, he was still wearing it yesterday in Municipal Court when he pleaded guilty to petty larceny of the suit, a wallet, a watch and $30 in cash.

Judge George D. Neilson, the prosecution, the defense and Ealley himself agreed that the gray pinstripe model fitted perfectly, but Judge Neilson reluctantly decided Ealley would have to change it for a suit of a different stripe, in which to serve six months on each of two larceny counts, besides paying a $200 fine on each.

The only one who was happy about the change of apparel for Ealley was Nick Arlo of 1349 Maryland ave. ne., owner of the garment.

Dose of Gasoline

A 7-month-old Rockville, Md., girl was reported "doing well" last night after having swalloped a quantity of gasoline yesterday which was given her by a 2-year-old sister.

The infant, Kathryn Bobo, daughter of Chief Pharmacists Mate Artie B. Bobo, USN, was rushed to Bethesda Naval Hospital by Rockville volunteer firemen. The child's parents said the gasoline was inadvertently left in a can on the back porch.

81 Apartments Planned

Arlington County has issued building permits for construction of an 81-unit apartment development to be known as Virginia Gardens, in the 1600-1700 block of S. Taylor st. The two-story units with 302 rooms, will cost an estimated $503,000.

Burglary Suspect Seized

The suspect, William Alphonso Johnson, 1709 Ninth st. nw., was picked up at the Fort Myer Market on Fort Myer drive at 10 a. m., after police received a tip he was in the vicinity. He faces a preliminary hearing this morning in Arlington County Court.

'Fight Rat Months' Coming

Just to make certain there'll be no backsliding as a result of the Interior Department's designation of Washington as "national demonstration city" for rat control, the Commissioners yesterday proclaimed March and April as "fight rat months."

Meanwhile, University of Maryland officials distributed 14,000 cans of a new-type rat poison to farm agents from 23 counties, as a prelude to the State's "rat death week," which opens Monday.

New Bus Service Today

Bus service for Shipley Terrace residents to the school and shopping section in the triangle formed by 25th st. se., Naylor rd., and Good Hope rd., will begin tomorrow, Capital Transit announced yesterday.

Known as Route W-2, the new line will operate every 20 minutes during rush hours, and every 30 minutes at other times, starting from Southern ave. at 23rd st. se. It will connect with Route C-2, W-8 and W-8 bus lines.

Gets $800 for Injuries

A District Court jury yesterday awarded Mrs. Rose Bovelle, 56, of 1425 Mon roe st. ne., $800 for back injuries suffered when a chair was accidentally pulled from her as she started to sit down.

The mishap occurred in the Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., store at 1214 F st. nw., last March. The store corporation was named defendant in the action. Mrs. Bovello's husband, Samuel, was granted $200 for medical expenses.

Fare Hearings Postponed

Hearings on the petition of the A. B. & W. Transit Co. for a fare increase have been postponed from March 19 to April 19, the Interstate Commerce Commission announced yesterday.

Caught in Cave-in

A District laborer, John Vidal, 47, of 60 New York ave. ne., was buried several minutes yesterday under about three feet of earth when a ditch in which he was working at East Indian Spring dr. and Franklin ave., Silver Spring, caved in.

Fellow workmen extricated Vidal and he was taken to Washington Sanitarium, where he was found to have a broken arm but was otherwise unhurt, police said.

Third Suspect Arrested in Kidnap-Robberies

Police gave his name as Sidney D. Gross, 19, alias David Patterson, formerly of 1006 4th st. nw.

Gross, along with two other youths, is accused of kidnaping and robbing a Naval Gun Factory painter, taking his automobile and then holding up a liquor store and a pharmacy.

Police would not divulge on what information they were able to arrest Gross, who had been sought, it was said, for the last several days. On Friday, police announced that after a careful study of a suspected neighborhood and a quick raid, they arrested Roger D. Grant, 16, a former junior high school pupil, and Bernard E. Ward, 19, an AWOL Army private.

Mulligan Funeral Set For Monday

Funeral services for William A. Mulligan, 59, retired Government employe, who died Thursday, will be held at 9:30 a. m. Monday at his home, 4513 New Hampshire ave. nw.

High mass will be said at 10 a. m. Monday in St. Gabriel's Church, Grant Circle nw., with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Mulligan, native of Philadelphia, came to Washington in 1910. His father, John Mulligan, was then superintendenet of Rock Creek Park.

Mr. Mulligan joined the Treasury Department in 1912, and four years later transferred to the United States Chamber of Commerce where he was an assistant division chief. From 1926 until 1941 he worked for the Ourisman Chevrolet Sales Corp. After a year as clerk with the War Department in the Pentagon Building, he retired in 1942 because of high blood pressure.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Edna Mulligan of the New Hampshire ave. address; a daughter, Mrs. Edna Crovato, who lives next door, 4511 New Hampshire ave.; a son, William A. Mulligan, jr., 3129 Jennings rd., Kensington, Md., and a brother, Jack Mulligan, Yonkers, N. Y.

Private Property Parking Rule Aids Theater Manager

An old District regulation which prohibits parking on private property without the owner's permission yesterday solved one of the First Precinct's newest headaches.

Motorists parking cars in a 10-foot alley behind the Trans-Lux Theater have long bothered Theater Manager Roland Robbins and police who believed they could not tag cars parked on private property.

After considerable discussion, Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King decided that the existing regulation would apply to the Trans-Lux case. King's solution now allows police to tow away cars parked in the alley. Drivers who cannot prove permission of the owner are liable to a $25 fine, King said.

Streetcar Passengers Cut by Hurled Bottle

Frank L. Hodges, 32, 4425 New Hampshire ave. nw., a streetcar passenger, was cut in the face and right eye at 4th and H sts. nw. last night when a bottle crashed through a window.

Another passenger, Robert L. Yelden, 19, 17 K st. ne., who also was cut, jumped off the car and chased a group of boys. One, 9 years old, was caught, and charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, police said. Hodges was treated at Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital.

D. C. Rule Bill Opposed by Junior Board

A Junior Board of Commerce membership survey—with 23 per cent of the 800 members voting—yesterday opposed the Auchincloss-Ball home rule bill by a 2-to-1 ballot.

The vote indicated that the organization favors home rule for the District in principle, but only along with national representation.

A local referendum on any plan to change the District government was favored.

Results of the Junior Board count were similar to the balloting of the Board of Trade, in which 30 per cent of the membership responded last week.

The questionnaire and the voting percentages were as follows:

1. Do you favor the adoption of the Auchincloss-Ball Bill H. R. 4902? Yes, 30.9 per cent. No, 63 per cent.
2. If your answer to Question No. 1 is "No" or "Undecided," are you in favor of the principle of home rule? Yes, 45.6 per cent. No, 47.4 per cent.
3. Do you think those living in the District, should approve by an officially conducted referendum vote, any new form of government before it is put into effect? Yes, 83.6 per cent. No, 15.2 per cent.
4. A new method of Federal payment toward support of our local government is suggested in the Auchincloss-Ball bill. It might increase the Federal payment. Would you favor the Auchincloss-Ball bill even if it meant a lower Federal payment? Yes, 23 per cent. No, 70.3 per cent.
5. Are you in favor of local home rule if you can not have representation in Congress with it? Yes, 35.2 per cent. No, 60.6 per cent.

McGuire Gets Sentence of 5 to 15 Years

Nixon McGuire, 37-year-old slayer of his married mistress, Mrs. Theodora Rowell, yesterday was sentenced to serve 5 to 15 years for manslaughter.

Associated Justice Edward M. Curran pronounced the sentence in District Court where McGuire, a truck driver, had been convicted of beating the woman to death on last September 10. in the basement apartment they shared at 1919 I st. nw.

In another case, Floyd Gilliam, 24, 1320 Corcoran st., nw., received a 20-to-30-year sentence for second-degree murder standing from the fatal shooting of his girl friend, Alberta Boyd, June 2, 1946, during an argument.

Paul C. Lewis, 33, of Arlington, Va., a former Metropolitan Policeman was fined $250 and placed on probation by Associate Justice Alexander Holtzoff after he pleaded guilty to promoting a lotery.

Fine of $50 each were levied against 11 others indicted with Lewis on lesser lottery charges.

Ashby Willis, 34, of 1112 8th st. nw., was sentenced to 3 to 10 years on a charge of carnal knowledge involving a 14-year-old girl last June 30.

Norman Kaiser, 24, of 29 46th st. se., received 1 to 3 years for attempting to rape a 24-year-old woman last November 24.

Richard Ragan, 725 Quackenbos st. nw., was sentenced to 20 months to 5 years on narcotics charges.

Mrs. Sutton, Active Church Member, Dies

Mrs. Roberta Lee Sutton, 84, active churchwoman and Arlington resident for 58 years, died of a heart attack yesterday at her home, 1310 N. Wakefield st.

Born in Newington, Fairfax County, she was married to John W. Sutton in 1884. Six years later, the couple moved to Arlington, where Mr. Sutton operated Sutton's store at Glebe rd. and Wilson blvd. until his death in 1910.

Mrs. Sutton, who joined the Mount Olivet Methodist Church in 1893, taught its Bible class for 35 years. She also served as president of the Ladies Aid Society and of the Missionary Society.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. at the Mount Olivet Church, with burial in Oakwood Cemetery.

Surviving Mrs. Sutton are four sons, Dr. Richard N. Sutton, Raymond W. Sutton, W. Marvin Sutton of Arlington and Roland L. Sutton of Chicago; two sisters, Miss B. W. Nevitt and Mrs. A. W McKenney, both of Arlington; two grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

2 Contest Girls At Bermuda Spend Day Sail-Boating

Hamilton, Bermuda, Feb. 26.—The Washington Post's Mary Worth Government Girls are having a fine time and wish you were here.

Nearing the end of their nine-day tropical vacation given them as first and second place winners in the contest to select Miss Government Girl for the Mary Worth comic strip, the two were sailboating about the islands today.

Only a few days ago, Gini MacNaught, 20, of 4615 21st st. ne., was at her typing chores for the Veterans' Administration. She was the first-place winner. Audrey Hall, 4815 4th st. nw., the second-place winner, was keeping books for the Agriculture Department. When the vacation's over, they'll be back at their jobs.

The week has been spent in a merry round of dancing with Army and Navy officers at the Hotel Bermudiana, steak fries on the beaches and parties. Included in the program was tea with American Consul Clay Merrill and Mrs. Merrill.

Pianarians, No Less . . .

WORM MODELS—Ursel Joyce Blumenheim displays wide-eyed models of Planarians, flat worms, much smaller than indicated, used in cancer research

Ursel Joyce Blumenheim, 16-year-old Kew Gardens, N. Y., high school senior, could fool a lot of people. The pretty brunette specializes in growing worms.

But not ordinary, garden-variety worms. Her pets—thousands of 'em—are extensively used in cancer research. Known as planarians, they are able to regenerate themselves, being neither male or female, or maybe both.

That means, to a cancer researcher, that he has a constant source of living and dying cells to study.

And that is the reason Miss Blumenheim and 39 other scientifically minded high school seniors from over the United States arrived in Washington yesterday. They are this year's crop of youthful talent competing for $11,000 in scholarships awarded by Westinghouse Electric Corp.

The 40 finalists in the Nationwile scientific talent search, chosen for their "outstanding science potential" from more than 3000 entrants in all 48 States, have conducted studies on subjects ranging from Miss Blumenheim's worms to higher mathematics.

With them are their prize-winning exhibits, some weighing several hundred pounds. The scientific paraphernalia will be set up at the Statler Hotel tonight following a dinner in their honor. Scholarship winners will be announced Tuesday.

Typical of the youthful scientists is worm-growing Ursel Blumenheim. Like the rest, she is good at a lot of other things. She has won prizes as a sculptress—but she does only the female figure.

"I don't like the bulging muscles on the male figure," she smiles.

Born in Germany, she came to this country in 1940. "We had to leave when Hitler came," she says. She plans to enter college next fall, and wants to wind up doing just what she is doing now—worms.

Board Clears Policeman Of Lie Charge

A Police Trial Board yesterday found Pvt. Raymond V. Taylor of the Traffic Division not guilty of lying to his superiors and of conduct prejudicial to the police force. Taylor had pleaded loss of memory due to a brain concussion as his defense.

The board found him guilty of having worn his uniform while off duty on August 23, 1947, warning him for this violation.

Pvt. Robert C. Redding, 45, pleaded not guilty to a charge of having been under the influence of liquor while on duty. The board continued their hearing on this charge pendng a decision on previous charges.

Aftermath of Accident

An accident in which Taylor was seriously injured led to the charges against him. James Perry Thomas of 1304 Eastern ave. ne., driver of the car, testified he took Taylor and another companion on a ride into Maryland last August 23.

The car struck a culvert. Taylor was admitted to the Frederick (Md.) Memorial Hospital and transferred to Providence Hospital on September 3.

Letters Introduced

Taylor's defense counsel produced two letters from physicians, one stating that Taylor was unconscious most of the time he was at the Frederick Hospital. The other, from Capt. L. O. Stone, commanding officer of the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, stated that the policeman's injury had resulted in a memory defect.

Taylor was returned to light duty on November 10. Two superiors testified they noticed he has been writing down meseages he receives, rather than trying to remember them.

Mrs. Anglin, Naval Officer's Wife, Dies

Mrs. Norma Stevens Anglin, wife of Navy Lieut. (jg) Hugh W. Anglin, died yesterday at Naval Hospital, Bethesda, after a long illness. She was 25 years old.

Mrs. Anglin was born in Colorado Springs, Colo., and received her education there. Married in May, 1941, the couple had made their home at 3000 Lee hgwy., Arlington, for the past two years.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a daughter, Barbara, and her mother, Mrs. Irene Alford of Colorado Springs.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. Thursday in Colorado Springs, with interment there.

Sandy Spring Rites Set for M. T. Fussell

Funeral services for Mordecai Taylor Fussell, 96, former president of the Fussell Ice Cream Co. who died Thursday, will be held today at 10:30 a. m. at the Sandy Spring, Md., Friends Meeting House. Burial will be in Green Mount Cemetery, Baltimore.

Mr. Fussell

He died in a Montgomery County Nursing Home after an illness of several months. Mr. Fussell had made his home in Ashton, Md., since his retirement in 1900.

Born in Baltimore, he was the son of Jacob Fussell, who was sometimes referred to as the "father of the ice cream industry." As a boy he moved here, where his father operated an ice cream store at 12th and F sts. nw. In later years he often told of his experiences while living in Washington during the Civil War.

In 1865 the family moved to New York where his father opened another store. For three years before becoming a clerk for his father he attended the Friends School in Providence, R. I.

In 1875 Mr. Fussell became a member of the firm of Jacob Fussell & Son, and the following year he took over the company and incorporated it as the Fussell Ice Cream Co. In 1900 he sold out his interest and moved to Ashton, though his son Norris continued with the firm until 1910.

Mr. Fussell had an extensive library, and enjoyed reading until his sight began to fail when he was 90. He was a member of the Rockville, Md., Masonic Lodge and the Sons of the American Revolution.

He had been a member of the Ashton Monthly Meeting of Friends for the past 47 years.

Mrs. Fussell, the former Isabelle Blair Fowler of Baltimore, died in 1919. He is survived by a son, Norris Fussell of Ashton, and five grandsons, Kennett Fussell, with the Army in the Panama Canal Zone; Taylor Fussell, 132 Webster st. ne.; Fairman Fussell, Panama City, Panama; Lewis Fussell, with the Army on Okinawa, and George Fussell, a student at the Yale University Divinity School.

Rev. Wallace O. Talbert

Winchester, Va., Feb. 27 (AP).—Funeral services for the Rev. Wallace Osborne Talbert, 81, retired Methodist minister who died at his home here yesterday, will be held at the residence at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon.

Prior to his retirement in 1926 the Rev. Mr. Talbert served churches in Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia and was superintendent of the Lewisburg District, W. Va. He had been pastor of churches in Baltimore; Roncevert, W. Va.; Clifton Forge; Salem; New Market; Covington; Roanoke; Winchester and Brucetown.

He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Mary Sue Kershner; and three daughters, Mrs. R. L. Hutchinson, of Rayham, Mass.; Mrs. S. Farnley Eskew, of Fayetteville, W. Va.; and Mrs. Albert Hamel, of Fresno, Calif.

Miss Frances B. Denton

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 27 (AP).—Funeral services will be conducted in Chestertown tomorrow for Miss Frances B. Denton, who served for many years as secretary to a confidential adviser to President Wilson.

Miss Denton, 77, was employed by Col. Edward M. House for 40 years and was his secretary until his death in 1938. Friends said she assisted Colonel House in writing the book "The Life of Woodrow Wilson."

She died Wednesday after a month's illness.

Miss Denton moved to Chestertown from New York in 1941. She was a native of Sutherland Springs, Tex.

Survivors include a brother, Ashley Newton Denton of Houston, three nieces and a nephew. They are Miss Marion Weeks of New York, Mrs. William F. Wells of Westchester, N. Y., Mrs. Edward E. Miller of Washington and James A. Given of Galveston, Tex.

She will be buried in old St. Paul's Cemetery.

Mrs. Disney Entertains For Author

MRS. WESLEY DISNEY entertained for her niece, Mrs. Milton Mackaye, yesterday at a cocktail party at her home. The former Miss Dorothy Cameron Disney, Mrs. Mackaye's book, "Explosion," was published on the day of the party.

The authoress started her career on a newspaper in Topeka, Kan., for which she wrote her first serial. During the war she was sent overseas to write fiction. Walt Disney was always just ahead of her and she was constantly denying relationship.

Mrs. Mackaye's new book is about Washington and its less conspicuous citizens, from material she gathered while a Government worker.

Mrs. Truman was invited to attend the party and, unable to accept, sent a lovely box of jonquils, tulips and stock from the White House greenhouse. Senator and Mrs. Brien McMahon were guests, as were Senator and Mrs. Howard McGrath.

Others included Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kringle, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Heindel, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Starr, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stokes, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Talburt, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Parker, Herbert Block, Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Berge, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Harkness.

Adm., Mrs. Brookings Honored at Dinner

ADMIRAL P. W. B. BROOKINGS and Mrs. Brookings, who are leaving soon for London, were honored at a dinner party last evening at the home of the French Naval Attache, Capt. Pierre Lancelot. Guests were the Naval Attache of the Australian Embassy and Mrs. S. H. K. Spurgeon, the Naval Attache of the Netherlands Embassy and Mrs. F. Stamm and Miss Ruth Tarrant.

Former Envoy, Wife Are Entertained

THE former Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik asked a few friends in for cocktails yesterday afternoon to meet the former Italian Ambassador and Signora Rosso who are spending several weeks in Washington.

Visitor From New York Is Complimented

MISS LOUISE SCHACHT of New York was the guest in whose honor Aubrey Starke entertained Thursday afternoon at cocktails. Guests included Miss Margaret Rathbone, Maj. and Mrs. Charles Warner, Maj. Jackson Phipps, Mannix Walker, and others.

The Washington Post

Thomens Hosts at Embassy Party Celebrating Dominican Independence

My Marie McNair

CELEBRATING 104 years of independence of his country, the Dominican Republic's Ambassador, scholarly looking Luis Thomen, and blue eyed Senora de Thomen, entertained at a reception yesterday afternoon, their first official party since they came to Washington in November.

Cole was at the front door at the big embassy way out 16th st., opening doors of one sleek limousine after another which drew up in quick succession at the door. Inside it was a gala scene with flash bulbs popping, glasses clinking, the hum of conversation beating a tattoo throughout the drawing room suite.

In the Victorian drawing room, the Ambassador and Senora de Thomen had receiving with them the Military Attache and Senora de Feliz, and Senora de Cohn, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the embassy. Senora de Thomen's gown was turquoise blue, the bodice embroidered in silver sequins and crystals and a purple orchid blossomed from her shoulder. Senora de Feliz was in black and Senora de Cohn had chosen a spring-like print.

The embassy shows the touches of the new chatelaine. In the ballroom soft green silk hangings veil the French doors which lead to the broad terrace. There are bright chintz chairs and sofas, and yesterday a huge cluster of Easter lilies decorated the piano.

Early arrivals were former Senator and Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, who were chatting with Mrs. Burks Summers and her guest, Mrs. Lawrence McEvoy. Mrs. McEvoy is on her way from Atlanta to New York to arrange for a concert with Conrad Thibaud in Atlanta for the Catholic Diocesan educational program.

Senorita Minerva Bernardino, of whom the Dominican Republic is extremely proud, was introducing Henriquez Urena, permanent delegate to U. N. from her country, and telling at the same time that she'll leave in a fortnight for the Ninth International Conference of American states as a full-fledged Dominican delegate.

News of S. African Flight

Mrs. Harry Andrews, wife of the South African Minister, came in with fresh news of the New York-Johannesburg inaugural flight on which the Minister was a passenger. Not due to land until 10 p. m. last night she had received word that the clipper had broken a record and had glided into the airport yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Canadian Ambassador, wrapped in a smart fur cape, found a congenial conversationalist in Mrs. Norman Armour, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State. Senator William Langer, received an affectionate hug from the Ambassador as he went "down the line."

I saw Senator Dennis Chavez, and Mrs. Chavez with gay red poppies on her hat, and Senora de Caceres, wife of the Honduran Ambassador, with Senora de Fernandez-Davila, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the Peruvian Embassy.

The new Peruvian Ambassador, Alfredo Ferreyros, was accompanied by Senora de Ferreyros, and the Haitian Ambassador, Joseph Charles, was among those lingering through the party hours.

Alfred Lilienthal was being asked the usual question, "Are you any relation to David?" and replied with a "No, but I do get a lot of his mail."

Come From Party

Mrs. Edward Conger was there, and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin came in from a party given by Gen. and Mrs. Richard Dear for Mrs. William Bird of New York.

Others there were Robert Dudley and Mrs. Dudley, whose late father was Ambassador from the Dominican Republic; Mrs. Thomas Dawson, whose husband was first American Minister to the island republic; Senator Homer Ferguson, Dr. and Mrs. George Trible and Admiral and Mrs. W. O. Spears.

A pretty young thing in black turned out to be Senorita Caridad Carballo, here from Ciudad Trujillo to study international affairs at George Washington University. And one of the loveliest of ladies was Mrs. John Colon, in a black cocktail dress cut off the shoulders and a giant pink rose on her off-the-face hat.

It was nice to see Admiral and Mrs. Charles O. Bunker again and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Vennell. Mrs. Parker West was there, admiring the buffet with its salmon glace, cold hams and salads and a huge snowy-white cake iced with a replica of the Dominican flag.

Smith Alumnae To Entertain For President

The president of Smith College, Herbert John Davis, will address the Smith College Club of Washington at 7:45 p. m. Friday, March 5, in the auditorium of the Cosmos Club at H st. and Madison pl.

Mr. Davis was inaugurated as president of Smith College in 1940. He was born in England and educated at Oxford University where he received his master's degree. In 1945 Queen's University at Kingston, Ontario, Canada, conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

After the address by President Davis, there will be shown the new Smith film, a moving picture with sound and color. The film is narrated by a Smith student and contains scenes of the campus, faculty and students. After the film showing there will be a reception for the president. Reservations are to be made in advance through Mrs. Frances I. McGarraghy, 1202 Portner rd., Alexandria, Va., Temple 8649.

President Davis will also be the honor guest at a tea given at the Holton Arms School at 2125 S st. nw. at 4 p. m. on Friday, March 5.

Ensign Albright To Wed Miss Klein

Mr. and Mrs. George Klein of Nashville, Tenn., formerly of Baltimore, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss C. Dudley Klein, to Ensign John J. Albright, jr., USN.

The bride-elect was graduated from the College Department at Ward Belmont School in Nashville, where she was a member of the Agora Club.

Ensign Albright is the son of Col. John J. Albright, USA, and the late Mrs. Albright. He was graduated from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis in June, 1945, and is now engineer officer of the destroyer Waldron, based at New Orleans, La.

From Buttons to Eagles

Congressional Exhibit Shows Noted Hobbies

By Genevieve Reynolds

MICROSCOPIC SIZE pitchers . . . gold and glass eagles . . . dainty baby clothes . . . hand hooked rugs . . . glass slippers of varied sizes and shapes . . . rare old books . . . dolls from every land . . . antique buttons . . . mustache cups . . . shells . . . around the world souvenirs. All these and dozens of other collections were exhibited at the Congressional Club's hobby show yesterday by spouses of the Nation's lawmakers

The displays not only disclosed interesting hobbies but revealed many unknown talents. Mrs. Wallace H. White, jr., wife of the Maine Senator, turned out to be an expert (as is her husband) on rare books. Bringing along many of the Senator's valued volumes to illustrate her lecture, she not only told the history of each tome but gave concrete suggestions on how to bind and open them properly. And when it comes to binding books, Mrs. White definitely has the professional touch.

Did you know that all one valve shells have their apertures on the right hand side except the left-handed whelk? Mrs. Holland Spessard, wife of the Florida Senator not only has a couple of thousand shells, including a whelk one, but can reel off the history of each with the fluency of an authority. Her varied collection, exhibited yesterday, included everything from purple snails and lemon colored pictens to the well known sea shells. All except one spider shaped shell, picked up in Japan by her son, were found on the Florida shores.

Doll Is Shown

A Hungarian crying doll, made so perfectly that you could see the tears streaming from her eyes, was among a Dresden china collection of Mrs. Walt Horan, wife of a Washington Representative.

Sets of Mexican silver were exhibited by Mrs. Otis Bland of Virginia and Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin.

Amber Moslem prayer beads and Mosiac earrings were among the interesting objects displayed by Mrs. LeRoy Johnson, wife of the California Representative.

Vivacious Mrs. Aime J. Forand, wife of the Rhode Island Representative, who can pile up a bowling score that puts most men to shame, also proves to be an expert at needlepoint. Her tapestries and pocketbooks drew much comment.

Speaking of needlepoint tapestries, Mrs. Hampton Fulmer, wife of the late Representative from South Carolina, had several on display that probably will become family heirlooms. She made them herself.

Mrs. Charles R. Clason, wife of the Massachusetts Representative, brought out an assortment of eagles. Some were on plates, others on cups, covered dishes, vases, bowls, cups and trays. Incidentally, it was Representative Clason who introduced a congressional bill for the protection of the eagles.

Handpainted shirt waist buttons, State seal buttons, along with ebony, glass, pearl and wooden buttons could be found in Mrs. Albert Vreeland's exhibit.

Tea Set Exhibited

When Mrs. Albert Thomas, wife of the Lone Star Representative, went to Europe last summer, she spent hours looking for a silver tea set. Just as she was giving up the hunt, she ran across a beauty in Austria. So she brought out her handsome prized Viennese possession for the hobby show.

Attracting much attention was a large handpainted punch bowl done by versatile Mrs. Edward Everett Gann several years ago.

Because music is the hobby of Corrine Riley and Mrs. Hubert S. Ellis, they played and sang their favorites. Mrs. Riley, wife of the South Carolina Representative played several piano numbers and Mrs. Ellis, spouse of the West Virginia Representative, sang a group of songs.

Included among the exhibits were Mrs. Owen Brewster's dolls; Mrs. Edward Burke's knitting; Mrs. C. W. Bishop 3d, minute pitchers; Mrs. Judson C. Clements' old wedding gowns; Mrs. Charles S. Dewey 3d, Polish stamps; Mrs. Antonio M. Fernandez's baby clothes; Mrs. Walter K. Granger's hand hooked rugs; Mrs. James C. Davis, flower arrangements; Mrs. Harley Kilgore's scrap book of inspirational thoughts; Mrs. Wright Patman's antique glass; Mrs. Lawrence H. Smith's coffee cups; Mrs. Lansdale G. Sasscer's mustache cups; Mrs. Harry McGregor's glass slippers; Mrs. John J. Williams' dolls; Mrs. Edward Martin's antique pitchers; Mrs. George S. Williams' quilts; Mrs. Karl LeCompte's glass slippers; Mrs. Don W. Harter's exquisitely made children's clothes; Mrs. Everett M. Dirksen, antique bottles; Mrs. John Lesinski's knitting; Mrs. S. W. Arnold's paper weights.

Mrs. Errett Scrivner, wife of the Kansas Representative, arranged the hobby show.

An auxiliary of the Christ Child Society, the committee raises funds to support Merrick Girls' Camp in Annapolis, Md.

Peace Committee Holds Benefit

Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould's home on Woodland dr. was filled to capacity yesterday afternoon for the fund-raising card party and tea given by the Women's Action Committee for Lasting Peace.

Proceeds will help finance distribution of recordings of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's talk on civil rights, William Clayton on reciprocal trade agreements, and by Dr. Milton Eisenhower on UNESCO.

The records, transcription of talks made on the Women's Committee's program broadcast over WINX, are being sent to all State and regional chairmen of the committee.

Mrs. Lilian T. Mowrer, chairman of the organization, and Mrs. Richard Harkness, vice chairman, presided at the tea table.

Boys' Glee Club Will Give Concert for BPW Club

The Glee Club of Hershey, Pa., Industrial School will give a gala concert here under the direction of J. Ross Albert, Friday, March 5, 8:30 p. m. Sponsoring the event is the health and safety committee of the D. C. Business and Professional Women's Club.

Proceeds from the concert will be used by BPW to furnish a room for a woman interne and a woman resident doctor at the new George Washington University Hospital, which opens this spring. This will be the first hospital in the District of Columbia to have such facilities for women in the medical profession.

The Hershey Glee Club comprises 40 boys from the group of 1000 orphan boys being reared and educated at the Hershey Industrial School. The glee club won the hearts of their Washington audience last year and praise for the excellence of their performance at a concert presented for the benefit of the Children's Hospital here. Their time and talent are being contributed for the George Washington Hospital project, and while in Washington the director and members will be the guests of the Business and Professional Women's Club, spending Friday night in the homes of members and friends.

On Saturday the group will be given a tour of the Capitol, arranged by Representative John C. Kunkel of Pennsylvania, after which they will visit Mount Vernon and lay a wreath at the tomb of George Washington. Luncheon will be served them at the Friends Church, through the courtesy of members of that church.

Patrons for the concert include Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Representative John C. Kunkel and Senator Edward Martin of Pennsylvania, Gen. and Mrs. Frank McSherry, Miss Ruby Nevins, Dr. Elizabeth Parker, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Carl Andrew Spaatz and Oliver W. Youngblood, mayor of Takoma Park, Md.

Assisting Dr. Alma Jane Speer, chairman, health and safety committee, is Mrs. Edith Eckert, who is in charge of arrangements and ticket sales. Tickets may also be purchased downtown at Anne Kelly's Health Club, 1429 F st. nw.

Fashions Now Stable— Today's' High Styles To Be Good Tomorrow

By Peggy Preston

"FASHION AND PRICE haven't anything to do with each other." Brave words, these, especially when they come from a designer. But Mollie Parnis can speak with authority, for she knows how to offer genuine style, not just fashion, for as low as $49.50.

MISS PRESTON

All of you know the trials and tribulations encountered in the search of a plain, simple dress. A good, wearable frock, with style, plus simplicity of design is one of the most difficult to find. True, one sees them frequently in the couture group showings, when price tags range in the $150 to $200 bracket. But in the medium priced lines, designers are inclined to try and make up for inferior fabric and cut by adding drapes, frills and excessive trimmings.

Not so Miss Parnis, who has made a name for herself during 20 years of designing, by concentrating on simplicity and cut at all times.

Miss Parnis, who has been in Washington to attend the opening of her spring collection, says the last two years have been like a designer's dream world.

"After the restrictions of the war years, we had a field day with new patterns and fabrics. We all had a wonderful time giving expression to ideas we had been storing up for years. Public interest in fashions reached a new peak and everyone was going around in circles for a while."

Now, according to Miss Parnis, clothes have found themselves. Women can buy this year with the sure knowledge that the garment will still be good next year. Once again they can plan from one year to another, buying wisely and sanely, gradually adding to their wardrobes.

"This is the only way to buy," explains Miss Parnis. "Too many women dash into a store, pick up several outfits at one time and a few months later are tired of all of them."

SEVERAL INTERESTING fashion shows are on the docket for the coming weeks. Washington's Fashion Group, which staged the successful "Spring in Washington" show for the benefit of the Cancer Prevention Clinic last Monday, will present another event on March 10, in the East Room at the Mayflower Hotel.

Stars of this show will be local designers, including those specializing in hats, dresses, suits and coats for adults and the toddler set as well. They'll display their advance summer lines.

Two outstanding shows are planned for March 6 at the Mayflower. The Women's Committee, Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, will have a tea and fashion parade at 2 p. m. in the Sapphire Room; and at 11:30 a. m., the first coordinated accessory fashion show ever held in Washington will take place in the hotel's grand ballroom.

Ann R. Silver of New York will officiate at the morning event. She will present her famous "Accessometer Show" which was first previewed in Manhattan. The show will feature new spring fashions in gloves, jewelry, belts and scarfs. Miss Silver will also give helpful hints on how to dramatize your spring prints; how to salvage your too-short slips; what to do with your one-of-a-kind gloves; and how to make one dress serve a multitude of purposes.

THE NEW St. Paul's Episcopal Church will receive proceeds from a fashion show, Saturday, March 6 which will take place at 3 p. m. in the Parish Hall of St. Thomas' Church. . . . The Mother's Club of St. Ann's School is sponsoring a fashion show on Tuesday, March 2, when costumes for grownups and teenagers will be shown in the school auditorium at 2:15 p. m.

Zena Greenberg Chapter of Deborah have scheduled a fashion show for March 2 at 8 p. m. in the Chantilly Room at the Hamilton Hotel. Miss Pearl Atkinson will commentate. Mrs. William Moss is chairman of the affair, assisted by Mrs. Albert Adelman, cochairmen; Mrs. Archie Zinnamon, Mrs. Isadore Parzow, Mrs. Paul Cooper, Mrs. Jack Wilner, Mrs. Julius Karp, Mrs. Leonard Rose, Mrs. Samuel Parzow, Mrs. Joseph Greenberg, Mrs. Reuben Alperstein, Mrs. Abe Marrow, Mrs. Leonard Lowy and Mrs. Morris Ostrolenk.

A fashion show and dessert bridge will highlight events at the Bethesda Woman's Club the same afternoon at 1 p. m. in the clubhouse.

Mrs. James L. Fieser is chairman of the affair and assisting her are Mrs. John Sidebottom, Mrs. Thomas Probey, Mrs. W. L. Brauer, Mrs. Lester Dame, Mrs. J. B. Bodley, Mrs. Mark Heller, Mrs. C. L. Lefevre, Mrs. Albert J. O'Sullivan, Mrs. C. Breck Parkman, Mrs. Norman Quasebarth, Mrs. Joseph Guard, Mrs. William Robinson, Mrs. Arnold Tolley, Mrs. Gordon Locke, and others.

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

RIGHT out of a Godey fashion book comes this Victorian inspired garment. No, it is not a dinner gown (although it could easily double for one). It is a hostess coat, made of black and white checked taffeta and has a cunningly concealed zipper connecting it from midriff to hemline. No shoulder pads mar the lines of the gently sloping shoulders and the short sleeves are formed by the deep cuffed yoke. The voluminous skirt is "swag" draped at the hemline and for the best effect is worn over a hoop skirt petticoat. Available at Kann's

Drapery Fabrics Made to Match

Have you ever tried to buy draperies to match an upholstered chair? If so, you know what a gulf there had been between upholsterer's fabrics and those you find by the yard. But now, thanks to a recent banding together of manufacturers, it will be easier to get attractive home decorating schemes according to Ethel Brostrom assistant home furnishings editor of Better Homes & Gardens magazine.

Manufacturers have developed 27 different fabrics which go together in harmonious color schemes. All the fabrics are available by the yard, so that you can make your choice for upholstery, slipcovers or draperies. Or when you select new furniture upholstered in one of them, you'll be shown fabrics that go with it for your draperies or for slipcovering your old pieces. The fabrics include stripes, plaids, florals and the new matallic weaves. The furniture itself has good modern lines, comes in three finishes: Oak mist, silver mist or jet black.

Mother's Ingenuity Is Taxed In Keeping Baby Snug, Warm

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

We are still in the season when children in Northern climates need to be kept warm. Some of the wakefulness at night, which bothers so many mothers, might be traced to coldness which wakes up the child and then he cries until he's comfortable and warm enough to go to sleep again. Notice how quickly a child drops off when put in the parents' warm bed.

Mrs. H. R. says she has been reading this department since she was in high school. "Before I was married, the people in my office used to tease me because I quoted you and your column. Now, I have a 20-month-old baby and an opportunity to put my knowledge into practice.

"She has been walking since her eleventh month, talks amazingly well, has never had an enema or a laxative and has never been spanked! She is so sweet and good-natured I thank God for her and you, too.

"This is the way I keep her covered at night. I put her to bed with a robe and wrap a blanket around her body under the arms and fasten it with two, safety pins right below her shoulder blades. She has perfect freedom of movement, but she cannot get away from the blanket no matter in what direction she turns.

"When she goes out in the snow I use a pair of her Daddy's woolen hose and put these on over her shoes and under the zippers of her snowsuit. This keeps her legs and feet warm and she comes in nice and dry.

"My house is not always spotless, but the baby and I have fun. She is intelligent, lovable and cute."

This pleased me greatly. The time to establish right attitudes toward child rearing is long before you have a baby to practice on.

We'll have fewer mistakes made when care and training and development of babies and small children are taught in schools to both boys and girls at an age when emotion does not hamper their ability to learn. At present, by the time they are married they are already stocked with old ideas; established prejudices and attitudes so that they tend to act according to old patterns instead of newer ones about which they know nothing.

A parent cannot go far wrong if she enjoys her baby, shows it kindness and appreciation, deals with it gently and expects it to outgrow any temporary misbehavior.

Your Questions On Homemaking

Where can I buy a cribbage board and what do they cost? I have tried the dime stores and drug stores and a gift shop in Silver Spring, but to no avail.
J. R. C.

There is a toy store on E st. in Washington which has cribbage boards ranging in price from 50 cents to $5.50. You can reach it by calling National 1566.

I have a white poplin uniform that I attempted to starch at home. I used starch, undiluted, and it looked very well after it was ironed. However, after wearing it for several hours, no more than two or three, it became very badly wrinkled, completely out of proportion to the time I had worn it. Is there some special way of preparing the starch or adding some ingredient which will help it hold its shape?
E. M.

You have, I believe, used too much starch when starching your uniform. To make starch for uniforms: Mix ½ cup dry starch, ½ cup cold water. To this gradually add two quarts of boiling water and stir well. Now, use one part of above starch mixture to three parts of water. Squeeze starch well through the uniform, wring and dry. This will be enough starch to give body to your uniform, but not so much as to cause excessive wrinkling. If you wish the collars and cuffs stiffer you could dip them in the undiluted starch solution. Do this after the rest of the garment is starched. Gather the collar and the cuffs into one hand and dip them into undiluted starch, wringing out excess starch.

I have a green silk scarf, the color of which ran when it was washed. The dark green ran on the light green and it is now all spotted. What will remove these splotches? H. C.

Removing dye stains is very difficult because there are so many different kinds of dye. Also, anything which would remove the stain would probably also affect the design in the scarf. For these reasons, to make the scarf usable again, I would suggest you use one of the color-removing products on sale at drug stores to remove all of the color. Follow the directions on the package, then redye the scarf a plain color of your choice.

While pressing a dark rayon dress I got a few water spots on the dress. I sent the dress to the cleaners, but the light spots caused by the water still remain. Is there anything that can be done to get rid of the water spots? M. D.

To remove the spots, dampen the entire spotted section of the dress evenly, either by sponging with a soft cloth wrung out of clear water, or by shaking in the steam from a briskly boiling tea kettle. Press while still damp. Sometimes just scratching the spotted area with the fingernail or a stiff brush or rubbing the spot between the hands will remove water spots.

Just what is the proper use for the folded 3x4-inch informals with your name printed formally across front? Can they be used for informal notes or must they be used only for more formal replies? M. M.

Folded cards may be used in every way that notepaper is used and so they could be very appropriately used for informal notes.

I spilled some cream-type furniture polish on our newly papered walls—quite a large and heavy spot. Is there any way I can remove the spot, or at least lessen it? B. D. C.

Make a soft paste of fuller's earth or cornstarch and carbon tetrachloride. Spread the paste thickly (about ¼ inch thick) over the stained area and allow to dry thoroughly. Remove with a soft brush. If this doesn't completely remove the spot repeat.

I bought a white chenille bathrobe which is very soft and warm. Can you tell me how to launder it so that it will retain its present softness and warmth? Can it be laundered in an automatic washing machine?
L. D. G.

Your robe can be washed nicely in an automatic washing machine. Shake it vigorously while damp to fluff it. Now, place it on a wooden hanger, or a padded wire hanger, fasten the front and smooth the collar so that it will dry in shape. Dry out of doors if possible, shaking occasionally during drying to fluff. Brush with a clean, stiff brush after it dries.

PETUNIA!

I don't mind
A squeaking shoe . . .
At least, my friends
Will know they're new!

That's one view-point, Petunia. But if you ever get tired of it, put your shoes in a dish with just enough linseed oil to cover the soles, and leave them overnight.

Singer Speaks Some Lyrics About 'Men'

MISS PATRICE MUNSEL

Patrice Munsel, who is in Washington to sing, took time out to speak some lines in the Leap Year key. The subject? Men.

Here to appear in recital tomorrow afternoon at Constitution Hall, the coloratura soprano said her ideal man must be a "monotone" in contrast to Prince Charming "Two artistic egoes in the same family would be too much," she added.

She plans to combine home and career, she says, when the right man comes along. She began her career at 17 singing with Metropolitan Opera.

The dark-haired 5-ft. 5-in. tall songstress from Spokane, Wash., wants her mate to be 6 feet tall, or maybe a little shorter, and to have a personality adaptable to all situations. "A sence of humor is important," she insists—"particularly when someone makes the mistake of addressing him as Mr. Munsel."

House Joins in Senate Pledge Of 2½ Billion Cut in Budget

The House yesterday ratified a Senate-approved 2½-billion-dollar cut in the President's budget and promptly went to work to redeem the pledge by reductions in individual appropriation bills.

An $84,417,168 slash in the $587,837,431 asked for the State, Justice and Commerce Departments and the Federal judiciary was approved by the House Appropriations Committee.

Money for these four agencies was cut 14 per cent, deepest departmental incision this session, but Democrats charged much of the cut isn't a saving at all.

This is because $75,400,000 in contract authority was added to the $503,420,263 total of the bill. Contract authority authorizes the department to incur obligations that eventually will have to be paid for.

Cannon Calls It Meaningless

The 37.2-billion-dollar spending ceiling, previously approved by the Senate, was ratified by a 314-to-36 roll-call vote.

Representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) charged the proposed $2,500,000,000 budget slash was meaningless and had no more chance of attainment than the House GOP's ill-fated six-billion-dollar economy target of last year.

Cannon said everyone was opposed to unnecessary spending. He moved to send the bill back to committee and increase the proposed cut to three billion dollars. His motion was defeated, 277 to 73.

Required by the Monroney-LaFollette Congressional Reorganization Act, the legislative budget resolution sets economy targets, but isn't binding on Congress. As passed by House and Senate it proposes a minimum 2.6-billion-dollar payment on the national debt.

Agency Breakdowns

The four-agency bill, reported meanwhile by the House Appropriations Committee, approves these totals for the next fiscal year: State Department, $197,217,463, a cut of 8 per cent; Commerce Department, $171,087,000, a cut of 28 per cent; Justice Department, $116,330,700, a cutunder 1 per cent, and Federal judiciary, $18,785,100, a cut of 5 per cent.

Contract authority, not requiring immediate fund outlays, included 37 million dollars for the Federal aid airport program, 12 million dollars for air navigation facilities and 26.4 million for Philippine.

"Voice" Program Cut

The committee cut the State Department's informational and cultural program, including the "Voice of America" broadcast to 28 million dollars. This was a reduction of $6,378,000, but nearly twice what Congress allowed for this year.

The accompanying report criticized State Department employment methods. It accused the department of considering persons who are "poor risks" for some jobs and said employes of "questionable loyalty" remain uninvestigated. The committee also voiced its "apprehension in the rapidly increasing number of international organizations of which this Government is a member, both authorized and tentative."

One entire item of $520,000 for the Commerce Department's office of technical and scientific services was eliminated, the committee saying business can do the job itself.

The Civil Aeronautics Board was cut $200,000 and criticized for "lack of administrative foresight and indecision."

The Justice Department fared better than the others. The Anti-trust Division received $161,700 more than it requested. The Federal Bureau of Investigation requested $43,900,000 and got the full amount.

First Violator Under D. C. Rent Act Fined $500

The first defendant tried under the 6-year-old District Rent Control Act was fined $500 yesterday by Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott, with the alternative of 180 days in jail.

She was Mrs. Mildred O. Watkins of 5108 3d st. nw., who was convicted by a jury on February 20 of a seven-month delay in filing for rent ceilings on four apartments at 914 Hamilton st. nw. The delay netted her $1402.50 over he legal rent as later established by the rent control administrator.

Judge Scott yesterday dismissed a defense motion for a new trial on alleged lack of proof that the violation was wilful or sprang from evil intent.

Carpet Beetles

Borers Now Threaten U. S. Constitution

By Arthur Edson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Congress has been told that the Constitution of the United States may be in danger.

The villain? Carpet beetles with a sense of hunger—but no sense of history.

This came out yesterday when testimony at the Department of Commerce appropriations hearings was made public.

Dr. E. U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards, let the beetles out of the carpet.

Here's the way the testimony went:

Condon: "You might be interested to know that we are doing a job for the Library of Congress.

"You know that we, as public servants, all swear to uphold the Constitution.

"The Librarian of Congress the other day told me that carpet beetles are getting into the case where the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution are kept."

Representative Stefan (R., Nebr.): "What kind of beetles?"

Condon: "Some kind of carpet beetles. I am not an entomologist so I cannot tell you just what kind of a beetle it is."

Stefan: "I know I cannot ship any plants to Nebraska on account of the Japanese beetle menace."

Now to the library, where the historical documents are kept.

Milton M. Plumb, jr., of the library staff, assured a reporter: "I just went by the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence a little while ago. They looked okay."

Actually, Plumb said, they're in no immediate danger. But the library staff has been a mite uneasy ever since it found a beetle lurking around the Constitution a couple of years ago.

The assumption is that he didn't come to read the preamble.

Dillon Called To Testify on Gang Paroles

Chicago, Feb. 27 (AP).—Paul Dillon, St. Louis attorney and one-time campaign manager for President Truman, has been served with a subpena to testify Monday before a Federal grand jury investigating the paroles of four former Capone gangsters.

This was announced today by Otto Kerner, jr., United States district attorney in Chicago. FBI agents served Dillon, absent from his home and office for weeks at the home of a son in Newton, Mass., a fashionable suburb of Boston.

At a House subcommittee investigation of the paroles, Mrs. Charlotte Campagna, wife of one of the gangsters, said she paid Dillon $10,000 for his help in obtaining release of her husband.

Mrs. Campagna, wife of Louis (Little New York) Campagana, said Dillon billed her after he had appeared as a witness before the subcommittee last fall.

Dillon testified at the hearing that he helped the four men get out of prison but that he received no fee. Mrs. Campagna said his bill was not itemized.

The gangsters who were released in August, in addition to Campagna, are Philip D'Andrea, Paul (the Waiter) Ricca, or Deluca, and Charles (Cherry Nose) Gioe.

Served Third of Sentence

They were paroled after having served one-third of their 10-year sentences for a part in a shakedown of the motion picture industry. The Government alleged the conspirators obtained upward of one million dollars through extortion.

The subpena for Dillon was issued several weeks ago. Deputy United States marshals who attempted to serve it in St. Louis were told merely that Dillon had "gone away." Later he was reported in Mexico City but could not be served there.

Day-Old Record Broken

Stockbridge, England, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Test Pilot M. Lithgow bettered the world's speed record he set yesterday when he flew a new British jet attack plane 564.881 miles an hour over a 100-kilometer (62.10-mile) closed circuit today.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Forecast For March

The weatherman's prediction of sunny skies will be marred by a steady drizzle of rain. Countless citizens will promise themselves that, tonight for sure, they'll get to work on their income tax returns.

President Truman will misread a speech and sing the praises of "that sterling Democrat, Abraham Lincoln." Lana Turner's name will be linked with that of one banker, two brokers, and a wealthy used car dealer.

The sun will come out from behind the clouds and Shirley Povich will discover two hard-hitting rookies at the Nats' spring training camp. The State Department will send a protest to Russia.

The weatherman will miscue on a prediction of rain, and local golf courses will swarm with divot diggers.

Countless citizens will swear that they'll start on their income tax returns first thing in the morning—because that'll be the 15th. Automakers will raise their prices again and declare an extra dividend.

The Nats will get their ears knocked off by the Yankees, Lana Turner will elope with the owner of a diamond mine, and Russia will send a protest to the United States.

Forty leading economists will issue a formal statement warning of an impending depression, whereupon the stock market will enjoy its biggest rally in months.

Egypt will claim sovereignty over half of Antarctica and the U. N. will be forced to take a plebiscite among the penguins to find out which claimant they prefer.

The Nats will announce the purchase of "a hard-hitting outfielder," prices of used cars will rise with the thermometer, and life in general will be pretty much the same as it was before.

REACTION

The recent appearance of my picture in this space resulted in a good many comments. They can probably best be summarized by quoting in full a postcard from an anonymous admirer who wrote:

"Ugh!"

The exclamation point was superfluous. Correspondents should endeavor to keep their communications as brief as possible.

PERSONAL NOTES

May Co., Baltimore, Md.: If you will send me a District Line letter erroneously mailed to you from Washington, I'll forward to you in exchange an order from one of your customers who apparently pulled my favorite stunt—and mixed up her envelopes.

THAT EXPLAINS IT

Our politicians promised
That they'd improve our lot;
They'd put two tasty chickens
In everybody's pot.

But now we look them over
With very best intent;
The "pot" along their waistlines
Shows where the chickens went.

"So you'd like to have a Sherman tank when a bus driver pulls out in front of you," writes Bus Driver Irwin Abell of 2505 Q st. se.

"How do you think the bus driver feels when you fellows cut in front of him, and then stop without warning?

"How do you think the bus driver feels when he is loading passengers and you pull up in front of him and stop where you're not supposed to?

"While you're kissing your wife goodby or waiting for her to buy a hat, he's struggling to get that bus around you and back out into traffic.

"I could add a lot more, but why bother? You'll probably throw this in the wastebasket. If you're scared to print it, that's okay with me.

SATANIC JOKE

Mrs. Robert Henry Martin of 3016 Dumbarton ave. nw. wonders whether we've heard about the old Quaker lady who never spoke ill of anybody. A friend once asked:

"Thee certainly can't say anything good of the Devil, can thee?"

Leonard Lyons . . . .

(Leonard Lyons' guest columnist today is Walter Yust, editor-in-chief of the Encyclopedia Britannica, who tells herein of the compilation of the new "Ten Eventful Years.")

BECAUSE contributions were solicited from leading personalities all over the world, some while the war was still on, and others during the months of turmoil following the end of hostilities, great difficulty was experienced in reaching the contributors. The mail was considered too slow and often actually unreliable. Accordingly, much of the correspondence was conducted by cable. Cables generally could not be sent collect to Britannica's home office in Chicago, so Britannica offered to remit the cost of cables to the correspondents. It was often necessary to estimate such cable tolls, and Britannica followed a policy of placing the estimates comfortably high.

Because of the wide variations in foreign exchange, of course, even these remitted cable fees often meant a good deal of money abroad. In this connection, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek was sent $30 to reimburse her for a cable from Chungking. Her secretary wrote that the whole cost of the cable was only $28.50, and, pointing out the difficulties of foreign exchange, suggested that the remaining $1.50 be deducted from any future payments for writing the article itself. Later, the secretary wrote that the Madame had contributed the $30 to the relief of war refugee children—and sent a cerise, Chinese-script receipt from the charity. At the then prevailing rate of exchange this was probably a substantial gift to the relief fund.

In many instances, Britannica learned, the sums paid contributors for their writings were turned over to favored charities. One famous general turned over his check to a fund for enlisted men. President Miguel Aleman of Mexico, who wrote the article on his country, gave the $270 he received from his article to the National University of Mexico. President Batista of Cuba wished to keep his Britannica check for a souvenir but bookkeeping rules precluded this, and he was sent a photostat copy.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Abdullah Might Pacify Arabs

By Drew Pearson

To some extent a diplomat is like a doctor. It's his job to heal international wounds, and to heal them before they break out into high fever. A doctor who sits at his patient's bedside wringing his hands and doing nothing loses his practice. A diplomat who does the same thing with international ills sometimes gets promoted.

Henry L. Stimson

Unfortunately, when it comes to Palestine, Secretary of State Marshall has been wringing his hands and doing nothing.

As a result gangrene has set in.

Instead of calling a meeting of Arab-Jewish leaders as did Henry L. Stimson to head off Chinese-Russian quarrels; or instead of molding world public opinion by issuing public appeals for peace as did Frank B. Kellogg in the Chaco, Secretary Marshall has simply let the Palestinian problem drift.

After months of delay, President Truman finally sent two notes to the Kings of Saudi Arabia and Iraq. But the appeals lost their effectiveness on other Arabs because they were never made public. And when news of the President's notes did leak out, General Marshall was so upset that he started an investigation to ascertain the source of the leak.

However, even without using the United Nations—from which General Marshall seems to shy away—there still remain ways and means of doctoring Palestine. Forthright leadership of the Henry L. Stimson-Charles Evans Hughes variety will be necessary. But the doctoring can be done.

Here are two possible remedies:

Remedy No. 1 involves King Abdullah of Transjordania, the one Arab chieftain not averse to the partition of Palestine. It also happens that Abdullah has the only efficient, fairly modern army in the Arab countries, trained by the British, and quite capable of maintaining order.

With the division of Palestine it would be quite logical to give King Abdullah the Arab territory now under the British mandate which the United Nations has decreed shall become separate and independent of the Jewish area. In return, Abdullah could be required to use his efficient army to maintain Arab peace.

Dealing With Arabs

Handling Arab chieftains is something at which the British have long been adept. We ourselves haven't done badly in recent years. The system is a combination of browbeat and baksheesh. All during World War I, Arab chieftains were kept in line by a constant stream of British silver. During World War II their baksheesh went under a different name—oil royalties.

Today, the kings of Arabia are just as dependent on us as we are on their oil—only more so. They don't want francs, or pounds, or even rubles in payment for oil—only dollars. Without dollars their desert monarchies would go up in dust.

This leads to Palestine remedy No. 2.

Some years ago Herbert Hoover proposed that the Tigris and Euphrates Valleys be developed by irrigation and water power, making them—as in the days of the Garden of Eden—one of the garden spots of the world.

Hoover's proposal could now be carried out for the benefit of the Arabs and as a means of counterbalancing Arab claims in Palestine. The projects could be financed from the vast profits of the Arabian-American Oil Co.

In other words, we pay off the Arabs for their equity in Palestine by setting up a new irrigated homeland for them in the Tigris and Euphrates Valleys.

Oil Companies' Debt

And United States oil companies, which have been reaping golden dividends at the expense of the United States taxpayer, could afford to pay off their debt to the taxpayers by subsidizing the new Arab project.

What few people realize is that much of the baksheesh which has kept King Ibn Saud happy so far has come from the United States Treasury. In other words, United States taxpayers advanced the money, while United States oil companies reaped the profits.

The United States taxpayers subsidy to the oil companies takes three different forms:

1. The cost of the American fleet which keeps a friendly eye on the Near East and without which the Arabian oil investment would be worth nothing;

2. Paying twice as much for Arabian-American oil as was necessary;

3. Cash advances to King Ibn Saud through the RFC and the Export-Import Bank.

Altogether, a total of 55 million dollars has been advanced to Ibn Saud by the United States taxpayer in actual cash; 30 million dollars having been put up by the RFC during the war when Ibn Saud complained he wasn't getting enough from oil royalties; and 25 million dollars having been put up by the Export-Import Bank so the king could build a railroad.

At first the Export-Import Bank balked at paying for the king's railroad. A highway, argued the bankers, was more practical. But the State Department demanded the railroad. Ibn Saud never had had a railroad and wanted to ride on one, argued the State Department. He was tired of camels and caravans.

This was the same State Department which has so consistently opposed the Jews in Palestine, but which has humored every whim of the Arab kings. So even though one Export-Import Bank official suggested it would be better to keep the king happy by building a small railroad in the palace grounds rather than going to all the expense of one across the desert, the State Department said no. In the end, King Ibn Saud got the 25 million dollars.

Worse Than Teapot Dome

This 25-million-dollar favor to the oil companies came on top of one of the rawest deals in American oil history—even including Teapot Dome. In June, 1945, the United States Navy signed a contract with Aramco (owned by Standard of California and Texaco) by which it bought fuel oil for the high price of $1.05 a barrel and Diesel oil for $1.68 a barrel, despite the fact that the British were getting oil in the Near East for about half that price, and despite the fact that James Moffett had offered oil in 1941 for 75 cents per barrel of Diesel oil and 40 cents for fuel oil.

Higher-ups in the Navy bought Aramco oil at this high price despite protests by junior naval officers and despite an adverse recommendation by the United States Naval Boiler Testing Laboratory.

Our faults

Our struggles with our faults in life . . . Would very soon be done . . . If we would make an effort to . . . Defeat them one by one . . . But usually we go all out . . . And try to win our war . . . By taking up the challenge of . . . A dozen faults or more . . . Or else it seems a hopeless task . . . And we delay the fight . . . Until our good intentions are . . Completely out of sight . . . And then of course there are the flaws . . . That we can never see . . . Except in all the other folks . . . Of our community . . . Or those delinquencies that we . . . Are happy to admit . . . Because we think our boastful air . . . Will surely make a hit.
